INVADERS ADVANCING

Bulgarians Believed to Have Taken Monastir While Austro-Germans Continue to Press on From the North.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

London, Nov. 20.—Although no official confirmation has been received of the report that the Bulgarians have captured Monastir, in southwestern Serbia, little hope is felt in England that the announcement is premature. Accepting it as true, the impression is growing that the entente allies arrived too late to give any service to the Serbians.

The only thing certain in regard to Serbia is that its military situation is going from bad to worse. In the north the main Serbian armies are giving way slowly before the battering Austro-German forces, which probably will move more rapidly if weather conditions were better. It is established that the Bulgarians are in Friep and at least have made Monastir untenable. The Anglo-French armies, based on Salonika, seem to do no better than hold their position.

Optimistic Over Greece.

The diplomatic situation in Greece still exists in a state of confusion. The reason for this optimism, however, continues to be obscure.

The weather seems to have intervened again in Russia. Little activity is reported except the retirement of the Russians to the east bank of the Dnieper in Galicia. In Courland wet weather in the swampy district evidently has brought sides to a standstill.

On the other front there has been few changes. Desperate fighting continues between the Austrians and Italians. In Mesopotamia General Nixon is reported to be in Bagdad.

Serbs Still at Monastir.

An Athens dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company filed Friday says Serbian troops at Monastir succeeded yesterday in advancing to a distance of about four and two-thirds miles.

The reference to the Serbian advance at Monastir is rather cryptic. Unofficial advisers yesterday said that the town had been occupied by the Bulgarians. The "advance" may have been made before the town finally was abandoned, or may mean that Monastir is still in possession of the Serbians.

Bulgarians Advancing.

Amsterdam, Nov. 20.—An official statement received here from Sofia, the day of which is not given, says that Bulgarians operating in the direction of Preslava have occupied Gila, breaking through the line of the retreating Serbians.

2,800 Serbs.

Berlin, Nov. 20.—Announcement was made at the war office today of the capture of 2,800 more Serbians.

Bulet at Dardanelles.

Constantinople, Nov. 20.—Competitive quiet now prevails on the Gallipoli peninsula following the offensive movement undertaken by the British earlier this week. An official statement issued here today chronicles only minor engagements. It follows:

On the Dardanelles front, artillery firing on both sides is in progress with heavy shelling on the Gallipoli peninsula. During a violent downpour on the night of November 18, two landing bridges of the enemy were destroyed. The tug boat and nine large barges were sunk.

Our artillery destroyed a bomb throwing and machine gun position near Karli Dere. At Sedul Bair the enemy continuously threw bombs at our trenches in the night.

French Fire on Allies.

Berlin, Nov. 20.—According to a report from Salonika received in Constantinople, the French Overland News Agency, French troops at one point on the Serbian front, fired on Serbian troops, whom the French mistook for Bulgarians.

It is reported from Cotinine that the Montenegrin officials are preparing to move to Cattari, Albania.

CORNER STONE FOR NATIONAL M'KINLEY MEMORIAL IS LAID

Tribute is Paid to Ex-President by National Famed Speakers at Niles, Ohio, in Fitting Ceremony.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Niles, O., Nov. 20.—The corner stone of the National McKinley Birthplace Memorial was laid here at noon today with ceremonies reminiscent of the former president's life. "Lead Kindly Light," the hymn which clung to the murdered president in his dying moments, and the "Star Spangled Banner," a bit of elocution which McKimley was wont to request in his White House days.

President Wilson was forced to decline an invitation to lay the corner stone, but he sent a representative of the national administration and promised to be present at the dedication of the building later. Other guests of the day included Senators Atlee Pomeroy and Warren G. Harding of Ohio; Representative William A. Ashbrook of Johnston, Ohio; J. C. Schumlad of Cincinnati, one of the trustees of the memorial fund; Gov. Frank Willis of Ohio; Myron T. Herick of Cleveland, former ambassador to France; and L. C. Dyer of Kansas, a member of congress and commander of the United Spanish War Veterans; Gov. Willis, Mr. Herick and Congressman Dyer being the principal speakers.

The day's program began with a parade in which state troops, veteran organizations, Masons and other organizations in which McKimley was interested, participated. Bands of Spanish War Veterans and posts of the Grand Army of the Republic from Cleveland, Alliance, Canton and Akron, O., and Pittsburgh, Pa., were in the parade. Half a dozen bands made music for the parade.

Masonic Tablet.

After the Masonic part of the program a tablet was affixed to the stone, bearing this inscription:

ERECTED 1915.
"To Perpetuate the Name and Achievements of William McKinley, Twenty-fifth President of the United States."
BORN January 29, 1843.
DIED September 14, 1901.

The building itself when completed will be a two story structure of severe colonial design flanked by one story wings of almost equal length with the main structure. The main portion is to be supported by six Ionic columns and the facade of each wing will carry as many similar supports in section. The cornice will be plain, and rectangular doors and windows will emphasize the straight lines of the design.

STARTS ACTION AGAINST RAILROAD CAFE AT MADISON

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., Nov. 20.—Attorney General Owen has started an action against the Northwestern cafe of this city under the women's hours of labor act to collect $1,000 in fines, for alleged violation of the law. It is charged in the complaint that he worked many of the dining room girls over time. Three of them made a complaint to the industrial commission for relief and the evidence was then certified to the attorney general's office for action. Mr. Owen served the complaints on Mr. Ganz, the manager of the cafe, yesterday.

S. O. S. CALL OF ANCONA RUSHED AID

SECOND ITALIAN LINER HEARD MESSAGE AND ADVANCED TO SCENE UNDER FULL STEAM.

SECOND HELP MESSAGE

Operator Tells How Steamer France First Wrecked of Being Torpedoed But Liner Found No Trace of Wreckage.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

New York, Nov. 20.—Fresh and dramatic details of what happened in the Mediterranean on the morning of November 9 when the Ancona was torpedoed by a submarine flying the Austrian flag, were brought to New York today by the Italian steamer Giuseppe Verdi, on her maiden voyage.

Rushed to Aid Ancona.

The Verdi heard the Ancona's wireless death cry, flashed it on to shore stations, which the feeble batteries of the sinking steamer could not reach, and then rushed at full speed to the Ancona's aid, her boats swung out, and her passengers lined on the deck and her officers momentarily expecting a death blow themselves from submarines known to be lurking nearby. The Verdi steamed as near as she dared to the spot where the Ancona went down, but her lookouts saw nothing. Then turning swiftly she fled for Gibraltar and security.

Luigi Moroni, the youth at the key of the Verdi's wireless, told the story here today.

"We were about 200 miles out from Palermo, watching for submarines which we had been told were nearby on the morning of the seventh," he said. "At twenty minutes past nine, I got a sign S. O. S. France. Submarine message sent. The message was followed by the France's position and then there was nothing more."

Notified France's Message.

"I replied, Captain Zannoni, and relayed the France's message at once to shore wireless stations at Palermo and Cape S. O. S. S. O. S. Ancona. The message brought back word from shore stations that the Ancona was on the way to help the France, and get the submarine.

Captain Zannoni altered the course of the Verdi and steamed north so that we would avoid the France's position, to believe the submarine that attacked the France was laying in wait for us, as the Verdi was a new ship on her maiden voyage.

We exchanged several other messages with the relayed ships concerning the France and submarines, and while we were talking in the Ancona's dispatches came in. I looked at the clock. It was half past ten. "S. O. S. S. O. S. Ancona. We got. The Ancona gave her position. I sent this message to shore stations as fast as I could and within a few moments got a reply from the shore station sent back an answer.

"Go to the Ancona," it said.

Prepared to Quit Ship.

"Captain Zannoni swung his ship right about and gave orders for full speed. Then he called the passengers upon the deck. At first he did not tell them what he had heard, but soon after that it would be better to do so. After that I heard the Ancona's life boats to run with provisions, water and life bits to the small boats. These were quickly loaded with emergency supplies and swung out on their davits. The passengers then were assigned to the boats, every man, woman and child being given a number. They were then asked to be prepared to leave the lifeboats as we did not know where a submarine would fire a torpedo into the Verdi.

"It was ninety-four miles to the Ancona, and we made it at top speed. I fired several times to get the Ancona by wireless but she didn't answer. Afterwards we learned she was hit had been shot away by the submarine.

Found No Trace.

"The captain was as close to the Ancona's position as he dared take the Verdi, and doubled the lookout. We slowed down and tried to find boats, but we failed to do so. Then we turned back and steamed away. We didn't want to stay there too long, and invite attack on our course.

Moroni's story was verified by several of the steamer's passengers, among them being Charles P. Terry, American consul at Torino, Italy.

Roma, Nov. 20.—The American ambassador, Thomas Nelson Page, has collected additional evidence concerning the sinking of the Ancona. It is understood he has established beyond doubt the principal circumstances in the sinking, including the parties responsible for the act.

Was Austrian Submarine.

Washington, Nov. 20.—The Italian Ambassador Page, at Rome, that it has no reason to believe that the submarine which sank the liner Ancona was other than an Austrian. Americans with the Austrian government's acknowledgment of the act, clears up the last possibility that it might have been a German boat.

NEGRO ON TRIAL MAKES STATEMENT

On Trial for Murder of White Woman Joseph Campbell Makes Statement.

Joliet, Ill., Nov. 20.—Joseph Campbell, negro convict on trial for the murder of a white woman, made a startling statement on the witness stand today.

I saw Mrs. Allen rub alcohol on her arms and hands and touch a match to it, said Campbell. "It was some days before she was killed, and she was getting ready for a trip to Chicago. When I saw the alcohol, I asked her why she did it and she told me."

There was a general bush of expectancy as the court room waited to hear "why she did it."

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

San Francisco, Nov. 20.—A sweeping investigation of the federal immigration service of the Pacific coast has been instituted on authority of Secretary of Labor Wilson, according to a statement of Assistant Secretary of Labor John B. Dinsmore, made public here today.

Investigation is said to have resulted directly from the arrest of eighty-six Chinese brought to this port on last voyage of the ship Mongolia, with the alleged charges of smuggling them ashore.

VILLA-CARRANZA SPLIT CAUSED BY ELECTION CLAIMS

Present Breach Between Two Mexican Leaders Opened a Year Ago Over Jealousy—Regards Victory.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Washington, D. C., Nov. 20.—The present breach between Carranza and Villa was opened a year ago, by jealousy, rivalry and mistrust. Peace was short-lived following Carranza's entry into Mexico City in August, 1914, a month later Villa began his revolt against Carranza, who was supported by General Obregon, General Angeles, military rival of Obregon, sided with Villa.

The Villa-Carranza breach widened when Villa demanded that Carranza proclaim himself provisional president, according to the "plan of Guadalupe," name a cabinet and call elections. Carranza did not do this. It would have disqualified him for the presidency.

The Aguas Calientes convention was then called to mediate. Carranza claimed the convention was packed by Villa delegates, naming his overthrow. The convention, in which Carranza was represented, declared Carranza a rebel, proclaimed the new constitutional government, elected Eulalio Guiterrez provisional president. The Villista armies captured Mexico City.

This was the strongest point in Villa's efforts. From this moment his power waned. Carranza and Obregon retreated to Vera Cruz. Villa and Zapata controlled three-fourths of Mexico.

Defection of Gutierrez started the disintegration of Villa's power. Gutierrez, outraged by Villa's ruffianism and barbarities, he said, left Mexico City with several thousand troops under General Lucio Blanco. He was followed by Carranza and Obregon. Carranza and Obregon gradually built up Carranza's army. Mexico City was captured and re-captured a half dozen times.

Villa's forces were gradually pushed northward. His most crushing defeat was at Celaya last spring. There he lost 6,000 men. Carranza's army was victorious. Carranza's army was victorious. Carranza's army was victorious.

Five years of revolution had prostrated the country. Fields were untilled or devastated. Livestock was confiscated. Famines swept the country. Business collapsed. Villa's army was pushed back to the border.

The last desperate struggle of Villa at the battle of the Carrizal, Ariz., having failed, Villa is entering upon the reconstruction of Mexico.

PANKHURST'S $200,000 TO GO TO MARY SMITH

"Uncle Jimmie" Now Paving Way to Give Chicago Typist Entire Wealth of Family.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Chicago, Nov. 20.—Mary Smith, the Chicago typist who went to Aubrey, Ill., to give aid and comfort to the lonely old age of "Uncle Jimmie" and "Aunt Louise" Pankhurst, and who was to receive $10,000 for her services, and her reward will be much greater than she expected.

Mary L. Crawford, federal immigration inspector here, stated today that he has received a letter from Mr. Pankhurst asking him to take the proper steps to make Miss Smith heiress to the Pankhurst property. The estimated value of the estate is $200,000.

Mr. Crawford selected Miss Smith out of hundreds of applicants for the position. The Pankhursts wanted a healthy young woman who would be like a daughter and who would guarantee to stay with them, unmarried, to the end of their lives.

Linn V. Price, an assistant United States district attorney, is drawing up a contract designed to secure Miss Smith's health should any relative of the Pankhursts resort to the course.

Middle Section of North Stand Goes Down Injuring a Score Including Miss M. Royce of Janesville.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Camp Randall, Madison, Nov. 20.—Minnesota defeated Wisconsin in one of the most terrific gridiron battles of the Big Nine conference season this afternoon by the score of 20 to 3. Minnesota secured another touchdown in the last quarter.

The game was marred by the collapse of the middle section of the north stand in which 2,500 persons were seated, the accident occurring shortly after the game was called. Among the injured was Miss M. Royce, a teacher in the Janesville High School. The extent of her injuries were not definitely known. She was removed to a hospital.

Among the injured were: Mrs. Frank L. Gilbert, wife of former Attorney General Gilbert; Miss M. Royce of Janesville, a high school teacher; R. A. Roberts, Racine, ankle broken; J. H. Rhodes, Chicago, ankle sprained; Mrs. Thomas, Milwaukee, ankle broken.

One man who refused to give his name was taken to the hospital where it was found by physicians that both legs were broken. Three students are believed to have been injured internally. Scores of persons in the accident were in a semi-dazed condition and seemed unable to express themselves as to whether or not they were hurt.

Three girls, students at the university, were taken to the infirmary, where they are said to be suffering from internal injuries.

The badgers registered the first score in the game this afternoon with a field goal. The score stood Wisconsin 3, Minnesota 0, at the end of the first period.

Wisconsin's first score came within six minutes of play. Eber Simpson kicked the goal. During this period the badgers had the Minnesota team completely bewildered and continued to break up trick play after trick play.

Minnesota Scores.

After two trials Minnesota pushed the pigskin over the goal line in the second quarter. Goal was kicked. Scores: Minnesota, 7; Wisconsin, 3.

Third Period 14 to 3.

At the end of the third period Minnesota had added a second touchdown to the one secured towards the close of the first half. The score stood 14 to 3 as the teams changed goals for the final fifteen minutes of play.

Badgers Win Cross Country.

Cardinal cross country runners captured first place in the annual run for the safety of relatives and friends. Although Watson of Minnesota came in first and Mason of Illinois second, Wisconsin representatives won, third, fourth, fifth and seventh and twelfth, following giving the Badgers the honors.

WILSON TO CONFER WITH REPUBLICANS

Washington, Nov. 20.—President Wilson today put into effect his plan to make the fight for military preparedness non-partisan. He invited Senator Gallinger and Representative Mann, republican leaders of the senate and house, respectively, to confer with him on national defense before the opening of congress. The president expects his plans will be opposed by some democrats, but has been assured by leaders that there is no doubt of passage of the main features.

Just before the opening of congress the president will confer with republican members of the senate and military and naval committees. When he meets Senator Gallinger and Representative Mann, the president will also discuss other legislative questions.

THREE R'S DEBATE AT FULTON NOV. 23 IS A HOMECOMING

George H. Rummell of This City to Again Appear Before Pupils of Forty Years Ago.

School boys and school girls of forty years ago of the village of Fulton will once again, on Tuesday next, gather in the little hamlet to make merry for the day, and incidentally decide whether the teaching methods of the present day schools are or are not better adapted to the needs of Young America than those of four decades ago.

The occasion takes the nature of a homecoming for a large number, and it is expected that in addition to those who received their early education in the little Fulton school, there will be many present, estimates going in excess of the hundred mark. George H. Rummell, of the city, the former school master, is going to be there and bring with him a number of Janesville men in prominent walks of life whom he taught "reading, 'rithm" and "rithmetic" in their youth.

The meeting will open at 10:30 o'clock and will be held in the Congregational church, since the school house regarded as inadequate for the attendance. At noon a big dinner will be served.

Miss White, the teacher at the Fulton school, and her assistant are to defend the old time in the debate, and Mr. Rummell and J. E. Wallen of Fulton are to uphold the negative. The question reads: "Resolved, That the methods of teaching in the common schools of the United States have improved to the needs of the pupils that these methods of forty years ago."

TO TALK RELIGION ON MONDAY EVENING AT CHURCH BANQUET

Seven Protestant Churches to Arrange for 1916 Sunday School Meet and Religious School.

One of the notable events of the fall in Janesville church circles will be the banquet at the Baptist church Monday evening in which seven of the churches of the city will participate. It is to be in the interest of the Sunday school work of the city, and will take the form of an Echo Banquet, at which the echoes will be furnished by the fifteen delegates who attended the annual meeting of the Wisconsin Sunday school convention at Green Bay, Nov. 8-11. The convention was a profitable one and those who attended were greatly enthused. Their reports will be interesting and practical.

The preliminary organization for caring for the state Sunday school convention, which will meet in Janesville in 1916, will also be formed. Another matter of great importance to be considered is that of the community training school for religious education. A program will be outlined and committees appointed. It is planned to inaugurate this school immediately after the holidays.

Professor H. C. Russell will act as toastmaster at the banquet, and music will be furnished by the orchestra of the Baptist Sunday school and a male quartet.

All interested in religious education are invited to be present.

The program arranged is as follows:

Music by the orchestra.
Echoes from the state convention, limited to three minutes.
The beginners' department—Mrs. Anna Walker, Miss Katherine Stoddard.
The primary department—Mrs. J. C. Hazen, Mrs. B. M. Cary.
The junior department—Mrs. C. P. Beers, Mrs. E. C. Hooking.
The teen age department. Demonstration of opening exercises—Miss Bessie Billings, Mrs. John Hancock, Mrs. R. Tate, Mrs. Alfred Olson.
The superintendent—Miss Mary Barker, Miss Austin.
The superintendent—J. C. Hancock, Prof. E. A. Whitford, Milton.
Rock county—Rev. E. A. Flann, Beloit, president of Rock County Sunday School association.
Religious education—Rev. Jos. C. Hazen, Rev. H. Brigham.

STOLEN FROM BARN

Two Young Men Taken Into Custody for Theft of Robe and Auto Tire.

The police today solved the theft of the auto robe, tire and rim and tubes from the barn of John Smith, 164 South Academy street, recovering the stolen property, and have taken two young men into custody as parties to the offense. Yesterday information was obtained that led to the recovery of the stolen goods by Chief Champion and Patrolman Smith.

After first denying having the property the man accused brought out the auto robe from under his coat and was jailed. Later he went with a patrolman and revealed the auto tire, rim and tube were secreted in a barn where another who is alleged to have stolen the property is employed.

Then he declared to the police that he was not a party to the theft, but that another young man had turned the stolen property over to him for disposal. "The police took the second man into custody and the officers said that he had admitted taking the property and breaking into the barn, while under the influence of liquor."

No complaint has been filed against either of the young men as District Attorney Dunwiddie is in Beloit today. The police will decide what action to take this afternoon. The stolen property will be returned to the owners.

Two men were arraigned in the municipal court this morning. Adolph Smith, a former police, guilty to drunkenness and was fined seven dollars or ten days. "Guess, I'll have to take the ten days," said Snyder when the sentence was pronounced.

Charles Brown of Milwaukee pleaded guilty to being a vagrant and was given seven days in default of a ten dollar fine. Both were committed to the county jail.

Frank Smith, who is known to the police as "Scarface" Smith, was arrested yesterday by Janesville officers for the Evansville authorities. Assistant Marshal Fred Gillman formed a belief that Smith had been implicated in the theft of wire at Evansville recently. A trip to Beloit with the prisoner, where the wire had been sold, did not bear out this belief, however. Smith was released.

Gained Eighteen Pounds After Using Three Bottles of Peruna

Mrs. Hattie Hamilton, No. 918 Glen Ave., Latonia, Ky., writes: "I have taken two bottles of Peruna and commenced on the third one, I did not really need the third one, but thought it best to take another bottle. I have always weighed 102 pounds, but since I began taking Peruna, I weigh 120, for the first time in all of my life, and I am now 32 years old. Your medicine has surely done me a great deal of good, and I have recommended it to several others who have begun taking it. My mother, who is 75 years old, had grown so weak she could scarcely walk. She took two bottles of Peruna and is fresher and looking well."

BELOIT LAYS PLANS

Line City Begins Preparations for Celebration on Occasion of Dedicating New State Capitol.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Beloit, Nov. 20.—Beloit and other principal cities of Wisconsin will be invited to participate in the greatest pageant ever produced in modern America. It is planned to be the feature of the dedication of the new state capitol at Madison, a year or eighteen months hence, and to present the history of the state in moving life.

Beloit is preparing a municipal pageant to be presented next spring in a movie theatre in a park here.

Evan Claire, La Crosse, Janesville, Green Bay and other cities in the state are contemplating similar plans.

It is planned by Madison authorities to have each city send a quota of its actors to present one episode in the statewide pageant.

Miss Ethel Theodora Rockwell, member of the American Pageant Association, with headquarters at Madison, is behind this state wide pageant plan.

WEATHER FORECAST.

Mostly cloudy tonight and Sunday with snow flurries near Lake Superior; colder Sunday and west wind tonight; fresh winds.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

The day we are to celebrate next Thursday is a national holiday which is distinctively American, and the proclamation of the president, and of the governors of the states, reminds us of the significance which attaches to Thanksgiving this year of our Lord, nineteen hundred and fifteen. Thanksgiving has always been noted for good cheer. It is the one anniversary of the year when scattered families gather about the old home table, and enjoy a reunion, stimulated by the best dinner which the old time mother can provide. Unlike Christmas, the day is free from the spirit of giving, with the hope of receiving, as much again. It is the day when the stomach receives special attention; the day when the children of the slums are gathered and fed, and when the tables of the masses are loaded with the bounties of the year.

It is supposed to be the day of universal gratitude, and it approaches the ideal, in this respect. The life is poor in spirit which fails to find some cause for gratitude, on Thanksgiving day.

The blessings of life never stand out quite so prominently as by contrast, and this is just as true of nations as of individuals. There was never a time in history, like the present, when America stood out as the one great nation of the world, free from war and tyranny. The one land of all lands, where the oppressed find freedom.

To be a citizen of this free and peaceful country today, is not only an honor, but a blessing, which should inspire in every heart the most profound gratitude.

This land has long been known as the world's great melting pot. Its sales have always swung wide to the oppressed of every land, and for many years they came to us at the rate of a million a year.

These people, coming from every nation on the globe, were subjects of kings and empires. Many of them had been subjected to the most humiliating servitude, and their advent into a land of freedom, where every man is a sovereign, was a glad revelation.

The war has drawn an imaginary line between the native born and adopted citizen, but it is only imaginary, and the hyphen, which marks the distinction, has no right to exist.

The British, the German, the French, the Irish, and the people of every other land, come to us of their own free will, to better their conditions. If their ambition was not fully realized, before the war, it ought to be now, for if they were still citizens of the fatherland, they would be a part and parcel of the most cruel war that ever cursed any people.

The adopted citizenship of America, above all others, should devote Thanksgiving day to thanking God for shelter and a home in a land that is free from strife and tyranny.

The kings and rulers of the old world may be great men. They are clothed with authority which brooks no denial. They command and their subjects obey. Under this iron rule human life becomes a by-word, and suffering and sorrow a common inheritance, and all for what, but to gratify the ambition of kings and potentates.

The most humble American citizen has occasion to rejoice that he is not subjected to this kind of tyranny, and that his first allegiance is to his God and himself. If at all appreciative of the question of loyalty will be easily settled.

It is perhaps just as well that Thanksgiving is not a world's holiday, for the anniversary would seem like a travesty, this year, to the nations across the seas. If they have anything for which to be thankful, it is difficult to discover at long range.

The history now being written is a history of tragedy, noted for unmarked graves, desolated homes, and an army of maimed and crippled men. An American manufacturer recently received an order for one hundred thousand dollars' worth of artificial limbs. That tells the story of one of the sad aftermaths.

As a nation, our sympathies have been stirred, and we have responded liberally to calls for aid, on the part of these unfortunate people, but we are too far removed from the theatre of action, to appreciate in any degree the horrors of the most brutal war ever waged.

While all Europe is suffering from physical agonies and mental anguish, which no pen can portray, she is also the victim of moral degeneration. The finer sensibilities have been destroyed, and the brute in man so predominates that deeds of brutality command a premium.

Inventive genius exhausts energy in developing deadly gases, and other devices of cruelty which would not be tolerated in civilized warfare, while undersea destroyers menace the great waterways.

The Armenian population of Turkey, more than one million strong, has practically been wiped out, within the past year, and not a protest has been offered. The atmosphere of war is a soul destroyer, and the great missionary work of the next half century will be to restore what the world has lost in moral conception.

We have occasion to be thankful, as a nation, at this Thanksgiving time, that the broad ocean separates us from this tainted atmosphere, and that human life in America still represents sacred value.

The nation is composed of units, of which you and I are a part. National gratitude comes to us as a personal obligation, but it should represent more than that because American citizenship today is a choice heritage, crowned with blessings.

The causes for individual gratitude are as varied as the circumstances which surround us. The farmer works with nature as a partner, and his is sometimes erratic. As a result, toil is not always equally rewarded. The hail, the storm, and the lightning sometimes destroy the fruits of a season's efforts, and in the ruin the man finds it difficult to be thankful at Thanksgiving time.

Death comes into other homes and breaks up the family circle, and the vacant chair is a sad reminder of happier days, yet there is a philosophy to drouth, and flood, to death and disease, and the God who created, equipped us for the great emergencies of life, and the star of hope holds us steady through its dire vicissitudes.

The year may have been disappointing to some of us, but few conditions are so bad that they might not be worse, so let us gird our loins and go forward. Here is a choice sentiment from the pen of Martha Shepard Lippincott, on "The Brighter Dawning," which is full of encouragement for discouraged people.

Although the world is full of trouble, Keep looking for the brighter day; When clouds of sorrow will be passing—

And peace and joy will come our way. Around the clouds will silver linings Be shining so that we can see The brighter dawning for the morrow, For all mankind, will surely be.

There's a life in life will be a night-time To dark but day will follow soon; No winter-time so cold and dreary But after while will come sweet June, And so in life there is no sorrow But what will sometime pass away.

With some bright dawning there'll be coming Around for you, a brighter day.

SNAP SHOTS

We credit the man who wears whiskers with a single to left. He generally has a sufficient sense of the fitness of things to stay off of roller skates.

It costs a circus $500 to show in our town. But it hasn't been many years since the circuses got a good deal of their money in the same way.

After a man is thirty-five or forty he carefully scrutinizes every piece of bait he sees for the purpose of locating the hook.

What has become of the old-fashioned woman who said: "His father's overcoat wouldn't make him a pair of pants."

Nearly every man has an idea that if he stays away there won't be any party.

A prune is just what it pretends to be, but canned apricots often come upon the table wearing a disguise.

When a man pretends to have had a revelation, that means he is either a faker or a fool.

You, too, probably have noticed that the underwear flapping on the line in the back yards always belongs to the man.

You will die in time, anyway. Don't permit a health faddist to beat you out of the fun you might otherwise have.

When a poor man desires to call another man a liar, he must do it himself. But a rich man can hire a lawyer to attend to the matter for him.

They argue or make believe:
They then from eve till break of day
Right merrily they bang away.

Big guns they roar and roar again.
Sounds like the battle of the Marne.
When one, exhausted, quits the race,
Another's there to take his place.

And mystify the jays and gawks.
The people do applaud and shout.
And wonder what it's all about.

George Wash.
Wouldn't George Washington have a slathering old time telling the exact truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth in this day and age? When a letter with an insignia front came to the house, Martha would say: "What's in that letter, George?"

George would reply: "That's a bill from the florist, m' dear," or would he suddenly hear a noise in the cellar and rush down to fix the furnace? It's a question, isn't it?

Of course, you will understand, Martha has not received any flowers from George, and that makes the situation a great deal more difficult than it might be otherwise.

But those were the good old days. The genius who invented the peek-a-bow letter with the firm's name up in the corner had not yet appeared. George couldn't lie to his wife over the phone, for the simple reason that there wasn't any phone. It sounds logical when you think of it.

Uncle Abner Says:

Genesis.
Out of the silence, song;
Out of the bud, a rose;
Out of the rose, the scent
The wind blows.

Out of the word, a war;
Out of the steel, a ship;
And, so we are to there comes
Out of the germ, the grip.

Out of the winter, spring;
Out of the planet, grass;
Out of the picture, package, seeds;
Out of the garden, sass;
Out of the bureau, a hat.

Out of the drawer, a braid;
Out of the closet, a hat;
Out of the house, a maid.
Out of the pocket, a bill;
Out of the bottle, a stew;
Out of the stew, a still;
Out of the dark, a zoo.

Money in it.
A year ago he walked the streets
With aimless tread and slow,
An old bananna at his neck,
His face denoting woe.
His coat and trousers shone with age,
His hat, once black, was gray,
And as he shambled here and there,
The people edged away.

Last night I saw him in his car,
In perfect evening clothes,
He wore the smile—the diamonds too,
The man of millions knows.
His overcoat was rich in fur,
A silk hat crowned his brow,
A friend explained the fellow's change,
He's teaching dancing now.

To the Cannery With These:
Is the lady of the house in?
Who opens?
What'll you have?
Who left that door open?
Are you sure these eggs are fresh?
Well, what's in it for me?
Lady, will your dog bite?

Miss Brown—Clarice—will you be my wife?
Is any hat on straight?
Number, please?
What's the score?
One or two laps?
How do you like my new hat,
John?

Say, Maria, can't you make the baby quit crying a minute?
What'd she have on, Mamie?
My petticoat ain't showing, is it, ma?

Haven't got a couple of good aisle seats, have you?
What time is it, Central?

Father, Elektra is a destructive canine, as you conceivably said, and I will get rid of her. She erred grievously in masticating the new parlor carpet."

"Percy, you are a salubrious child," said Mr. Boston-Beez, approvingly. "And to show my appreciation of your filialness I hereby grant you permission to have a party not only on your own birthday, on your little sister's natal day as well."

"Thank you, father. I will dispose of the canine this very afternoon," promised little Percy dutifully, as he removed his spectacles and polished them with the literary page of the Boston Psychologist.

And that afternoon he swapped Elektra with Harold Backbay for Harold's two bull dogs.

Mrs. Benjamin Reeves Russell, wife of Lieut. Col. Russell of the U. S. marine corps, is the organizer of a children's auxiliary to the Navy League of the United States. The purpose of this new organization is to interest the children of America in preparedness for defense and the doctrine of "America First." Mrs. Mary S. Lockwood, also well known as a leader of the D. A. R., is the honorary chairman of the woman's section under whose direction the movement is going forward.

CATARRH LEADS TO CONSUMPTION

Catarrah is as much a blood disease as scrofula or rheumatism. It may be relieved, but it cannot be removed by simply local treatment. It breaks down the general health, weakens the lung tissues, and leads to consumption.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is so successful in the treatment of catarrh that it is known as the best remedy for this disease. It purifies the blood. Ask your druggist for it.

BIG TAX REDUCTIONS THROUGHOUT COUNTY

CLERK'S CERTIFICATION SHOWS
DROP OF $47,146 IN STATE-
AND COUNTY TOTAL.

NO STATE ROAD LEVY

For First Time in History of State Aid
Highway Law There is No State
Road Tax.

Indications are that the taxes this year will be decidedly lower in practically every assessment district of the county. Certifications of the state and county taxes levied against the various towns, villages and cities have been completed by County Clerk Lee, and are now in the hands of the clerks who will proceed to prepare the tax roll.

According to these certifications the total state and county tax to be collected in Rock county this year is $244,316.85, or $47,146.57 less than the amount of a year ago. It is almost half the exorbitant levy of the year 1913, when the amount reached $432,620.00, precipitating a storm of protest which resulted ultimately in the overthrow of the McGovern administration.

Reductions have been made in both the state and county appropriations. In fact there is really no state tax except $1,000 which the state levies under the statutes and of which Rock county's share is but $28. The remainder of the so-called state tax is for school purposes and the special charges back to this county from the various state charitable and penal institutions. For the first time since the state aid highway law has been in operation there is no state levy for highway purposes and the money which Rock county will receive from the state for road work in 1916, will in reality be state aid. The county will not have paid in two dollars in tax for one dollar received in return as aid, as has been the case, speaking in general terms, in several instances. This situation, as indicated by the figures, is due to the economies which have resulted from the businesslike management of the Philipp administration.

The saving is not entirely due to state economy. The county can boast of a decided reduction in its levy which likewise is the result of careful and economical handling of the public funds. The county board at its last session appropriated $50,000 for general purposes, which is $20,000 less than the amount appropriated a year ago, and $40,000 less than for the year 1913. In addition there is the county highway tax and the soldiers' relief fund, which are practically unchanged.

As the result of this cut in both the state and county levies, taxes will be lower even in communities like Beloit and Janesville where the city taxes have been raised slightly. In Beloit, despite the fact that $12,000 were added to the school tax over last year, the tax rate will be lower.

For the first time in the history of Rock county the city of Beloit will pay a larger part of the state and county taxes than the city of Janesville, the levy against Beloit being $43,791 and against Janesville $40,952.

The increased valuation of Beloit is responsible for this situation.

Following are the state and county levies against the various towns, cities and villages as certified by the county clerk:

Beloit	$5,449.53
Bradford	8,012.12
Center	5,226.14
Clinton	5,264.34
Fulton	6,349.44

PRIMA DONNA IN NEW PARIS MODE

Louise Edvina.

Louise Edvina, the beautiful French-Canadian opera star, arrived in New York a few days ago attired in a fetching costume patterned after the Cossack's uniform. The long three-quarter coat is edged with astrakhan and has deep cuffs and a large collar of the same material. A charming turban of like material gives the wearer a chic air. The belt is a giraffe affair, heavily embroidered and elaborately trimmed with silver.

FARMER'S TEAM OF HORSES
MAKE DASH UP MAIN ST.

A team of horses belonging to Leslie Callow, a farmer residing near Johnston, made a wild dash up South Main street about one o'clock this noon. The farmer stopped to give the team some water at the fountain on South Main street and when starting away from it, the horses became frightened when part of the wagon struck a car on the corner of Main and Milwaukee streets. No damage was done, except a few bruises on one of the horse's legs.

Look at Yourself as Others See You

Haven't you seen walking dead people—people who moved about only by using all the energy and will-power they could concentrate?

They have a tired, worn out appearance, skin wrinkled, face drawn, eyes dull and sunken. They are not well. Have been suffering from some ailment from which they have found no relief, for months or years.

Are you sure this does not apply to you? Think it over.

The MILK AND REST TREATMENT has cured hundreds and hundreds of people ailing like you. Many wonder at what it did for them and others. Give it a trial; it will surely do as much for you.

SIDE LIGHTS ON THE CIRCUS BUSINESS

By D. W. WATT

On Wednesday of this week, I took the 11:35 train over the Northwestern road for Baraboo, Wis., where I had been invited to be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Al. Ringling at the opening of their new circus. On entering the train at Janesville, I was soon greeted by many old friends, among them Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Ringling and their son, Robert, who make their home at Evanston, Ill.; Mr. Al. T. Ringling and son, Richard, of New York City, and many other prominent circus people, who for many years have been in the Ringling and the Barnum shows. Theatrical men, scene painters, canvas makers and many prominent citizens from Chicago and other towns, all of whom were bound for Baraboo to honor to a man who has the courage to build in that city one of the finest, if not the finest, playhouses in America, Mr. Al. Ringling.

At Madison, many prominent people joined the party, among whom were the son-in-law and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ringling, and by the time the train reached Baraboo, it was crowded with a large excursion train. On our arrival in Baraboo, Henry Ringling was there with a big touring car to meet his brother, Charles, and family, and the crowd did not wait for the different directions, everybody in a hurry, and seeming to know just where they wanted to go.

Many of the old employees visited the winter quarters, and others the homes of old friends. As soon as I had brushed off a little of the dust, I was on my way to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Al. Ringling. As it was information that I was looking for, I made up my mind there was only one place to go, and that was to headquarters. In a few minutes I was at the palatial home, which is only a short distance around the corner from the theatre.

The massive home with its many entrances, it was difficult for me, as they would say with the circus, "to get out the front door." I was finally pushed the button and a maid servant appeared at the door, and asked me for my card, but I politely told him that I only had one deck in my pocket and did not have a card that, but it was an old friend of Mr. Ringling and was there only to make an informal call.

He ushered me into a large room which Mr. Ringling has used as his office. I found him sitting at a desk, and I found him busy dictating telegrams and letters to his secretary, and I was soon seated in a big easy leather chair, and Al. Ringling came to my room. Young man, there will be nothing more doing for a time, for I have many questions to ask Mr. Watt, and we will make a visit here while you run up to town and attend to some other business.

I soon told Mr. Ringling the business part of my visit was to find out as much of the particulars as possible about the beautiful new playhouse, and how he came to build so fine and beautiful a theater in a city the size of Baraboo.

The ground on which the theatre is built, which has been owned by Mr. Ringling for some time is eighty-eight feet frontage on the corner, almost directly opposite the old stone court house, and 132 feet deep, but Mr. Ringling had his plan for the building all completed, and just the size that he wanted it, he found that he was short four feet of ground in the rear of the building, which he would have to have in order to get just the size auditorium and stage that he had figured on. This land fortunately belonged to the city, and he was not long in getting a deed of the extra four feet in a few days the work was commenced, which was early in the spring.

It was about four o'clock in the afternoon on Wednesday, when everything was completed and put in shape, ready to be occupied in the evening. The building is as near fireproof as it is possible to build one, the entire front being of two shades of granite and white marble, and the entire building reinforced steel and cement. There are two lobbies at the main entrance of the theatre, a beautiful marble trimmed office being in the first lobby and at the second entrance there are six swinging doors and on entering the second lobby, there is a beautiful fountain, and opposite on the right was what they called an Italian rest bench. From this you enter the main floor which contains 344 seats, raised from the stage so that every seat gives a good view of the stage as does the front row. There are seventeen boxes, which contain six seats each.

Beautiful dark red velvet carpets cover the cement floors on the inside, as they also do down the main aisles.

the stowdust and the menagerie, but the dream of the Ringling family, and I had to bid my old friend adieu and take the train back home. But Wednesday, November 17th, put another bright day in my life, all through the kindness of an old friend whom I made in the circus business, more than thirty years ago—Al. Ringling.

MUSICAL COMEDY RATTLING GOOD

"Lady Luxury," Which Appeared at Myers Theatre Last Evening Amusing, Pretty to Look at and Done by Clever People.

Startling mechanical effects were conspicuously absent from the musical comedy, "Lady Luxury," which appeared at Myers Theatre last night. The producer instead chose to put his money into salaries for competent performers with the result that he cornered several grand opera voices and the services of a cast that was far superior to the average musical comedy cast.

The plot is woven about a little miss who has been brought up in the old-fashioned way by a severe old uncle, who becomes an heir to her 21st birthday. When she learns of the money she immediately plans to make up for lost time and tastes several samples of the forbidden fruit, but the musical comedy hero is there on time and forestalls any bad effects, and everything works out to a happy ending.

Florence Webster is a very gracious little prima donna, who uses her good dramatic soprano voice with telling style. Singing honors, however, belong to Forrest Huff and Arthur Al. Both of whom are gifted with beautiful tenor voices that have been well trained. Huff is a delightful comedian as well, and Albro's smooth acting is no doubt testimony to his experience in the Italian stage of different types, the singing of both men was worth going far to hear.

Fritz Von Busing has both charm and vivacity in addition to a most pleasant mezzo-soprano voice. Joseph W. Herbert earns noble credit for having staged the production and for being a highly successful comedian, while Sam J. Burton does excellent work as a character part. Eddie Morris sings well and dances beautifully. Gypsy Dale is a charming little ingenue.

There is a chorus composed of good looking people with real musical ability and pleasing deportment, and it is perfectly easy to believe that Lucille is responsible for the very beautiful costuming worn.

The musical score is pleasing. Some of the numbers notably "Dancing With the Girl from Home," "Written in the Book of Destiny," "Dream on My Princess," "Pick a Pickin'," and the Russian Dance Song, are very charming and original.

AT THE APOLLO.

Blanche Sweet in "A Dual Role." Are you two distinct persons? Is there lurking somewhere in your being another personality entirely different from the one you now have? Scientists say there is and at times it tries to appear on the surface; but the stronger will power of your present personality drives it into seclusion; that inside your mind two personalities are continually fighting to gain the upper hand. What would happen to the submerged personality should assert itself.

See what happened to winsome, sweet Dorothy, when the cruel, malicious Becky asserted herself in "The Case of Becky," the "Lucky-Belasco production of Edward Loomis, famous drama, which will be the attraction at the Apollo on Tuesday, with the beautiful and clever actress Blanche Sweet as Dorothy-Becky.

Never before has this wonderful Lasky star been seen in a characterization of this kind. The clever transformation of face, manner and action as she changes from Dorothy to Becky show a new side to this versatile young artist that eclipses anything she has done before.

When the leading artistic theatrical producer of the world, David Belasco, presented "The Case of Becky," on the speaking stage, in New York, it caused a sensation. The idea of a feminine "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" was novel one and the tremendous battle between two personalities in one person, resulting in the killing of the weaker, was something so unusual that the play was the talk of the entire country.

The Lasky company has given the play a most lavish production and in the cast supporting Miss Sweet are Carlyle Blackwell, Theodore Roberts, James Earl Ray, and other members of the all-star organization.

That there should be nothing savoring of unscientific demonstration in "The Case of Becky," the Lasky Feature Play company before the photoplay was finished at the studios at Hollywood, Cal., called into consultation leading physicians and specialists of Los Angeles, who passed upon the verity and truthfulness of the scenes portrayed. David Belasco did the same thing when the dramatic version was ready for public presentation at the Belasco theatre, New York, two years ago.

AT THE APOLLO.

Charlotte Walker in "Out of Darkness." The gripping drama, "Out of Darkness," with the distinguished actress, Charlotte Walker in the star role, will be the attraction at the Apollo on Monday under the direction of the Lasky company.

Walker will be remembered by photodramatic patrons here for her splendid performance of the woman of the slums in "Kindling."

In "Out of Darkness" Charlotte Walker is seen as a wealthy society girl too interested in pleasure to pay any attention to the conditions of the thousands of struggling workers who make her millions for her. How while sailing her sloop she is run down and injured by a steamer, loses her identity and goes to work in her own cannery where she rescues the manager from the burning office, are but a few of the thrilling incidents in this stirring photoplay.

Miss Walker is supported by a cast of unusual merit, among the principal players being Thomas Meighan, Mary Dawn, Tom Rorand, Lillian Littlefield, H. B. Carpenter and other members of the Lasky all-star stock company.

AT THE APOLLO.

Cyril Maude in "Peer Gynt." Cyril Maude, the celebrated English star of "Grumpy," will be presented in Oliver Morosco's elaborate photodramatization of Henrik Ibsen's "Peer Gynt" at the Apollo theatre on Wednesday.

Famous as a master of make-up, an interesting specimen of his powers is presented not only in his own remarkable succession of makeups but also in the makeup he personally applied in little Mary Ruby's portrayal of Ingrid when she has reached old age. Always cast in ingenue characters in which she has gained a wide reputation, Miss Ruby has never had to essay any such role as that of a toothless old grandma. Cyril Maude, generously appreciating the plight of the younger player, came to her rescue and with "liner" and grease paint reproduced that graphic picture of decrepitude upon her face which is such an artistic feature of the closing episode of "Peer Gynt." When in the course of the celebrated story "Peer Gynt," himself a broken old man, returns to the friends of his wasted youth in Gudbrandsdalen none present a more pathetic proof of the toll the fast moving years have taken than old Ingrid. When one sees the crouching eyes and sunken cheeks, sticking it is almost unbelievable that the impersonated by a mere slip of a girl in her early twenties. Few stars, it might be added, would act as generously as did Cyril Maude.

AT THE MAJESTIC.

Viola Allen Tells of Work in Photoplay.

Viola Allen, the famous stage star, who recently finished her first photoplay, "The White Sister," Essany's six-act feature, is thoroughly enamored with motion picture work.

"I never had such an enjoyable experience in my life," she declared. "It was a complete revelation to me. I never had been a motion picture enthusiast before and had no idea what an art this line of work had become. I am entirely converted to photoplays and I think I shall be what you call a 'fad' for the rest of my life."

"The work itself was a delight. I enjoyed every bit of it from the beginning of the first reel until we put the finishing touches. The care and the detail in making a production like 'The White Sister' was utterly beyond my comprehension until I saw it actually worked out before my eyes. In photoplays, even those interested in the really artistic work done, discovered that there was as much art in working before the camera as on the stage. In fact, in some ways it is harder to pose before the camera than it is to convey your ideas before the footlights. On the stage you have your voice to aid you, but in the silent drama you must convey all your work by expression alone, which is no easy matter, as I discovered."

"I was both astonished and delighted with the finished production of 'The White Sister' when I saw it. The picture is complete in every detail and carried out the story perfectly. I think that the family of F. Marion Crawford, the author, will be as delighted with it as I was. It was largely because of their wish that I appear in the picture that I consented to engage in the work and I was especially anxious that they should like the photoplay."

"I am thoroughly satisfied that the picture will be an immense success. Its artistic value, not speaking of my own work, is wonderful and I am certainly well pleased that I undertook this, for me, a new line of endeavor."

"The White Sister" will be seen at the Majestic, beginning next Tuesday, at 2:30, 4, 7:30 and 9 daily.

AT THE MAJESTIC.

Variety of Curious Appear in Film.

John Cossar, Essany actor, brought to the studio his private collection of Italian military trophies to be used in the scenes of the "White Sister." These curios represent a ten-year accumulation from curio shops throughout the country. The film showing these is coming here, with Viola Allen in the leading role on an extended run at the Majestic, beginning next Tuesday.

AT THE PRINCESS.

King Baggott On Sunday.

King Baggott will be seen at the Princess Sunday afternoon and evening in a Universal feature, "The Reward." It promises a very good picture and in addition others will be shown.

The new screen makes a big difference in the pictures. It being possible to make out every detail from any part of the body, the Princess has been extended and many new scenes added, so that it will not be necessary this winter to make so many people wait on the outside.

PRINCESS INITIATES NEW SCREEN CURTAIN

Piquant Little Ella Hall Stars in Stirring Photoplay.

Ella Hall, as delightful and refreshing as ever, appeared in the title role of a play after her own heart last evening at the newly remodeled Princess. "Jewell," taken from a book of that name, was enriched with many pretty scenes and resulting in an effect that the book could not attempt to produce upon you. The quaint little story the play unfolded in the untiresome five reels of film, held the audience in a trance of emotional delight. Miss Hall, in her favorite role of a little girl, showed how a true loving nature toward all mankind, good or bad alike, can change the world of hate and jealousy into one of love, and resulting make home life truly a blessing to any one.

The manager of the Princess is to be congratulated upon the installment of the new silver screen, which brings the pictures in a very clear, untiresome way and does away with that common dread of sore eyes. No matter in what angle you view the pictures, from the very front seat to one at the extreme side, the characters do not seem at any time distorted or out of proportion. The interior of the theatre has also been lengthened to nearly double its original length, and is

The biggest "set" ever used in the production of a photoplay will be seen here at the Apollo when "Carmen" is presented by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play company, with the famous operatic prima donna, Geraldine Farrar in the title role. This is an exact replica of the Plaza de Toros in Seville. The plans of the building were made from old sketches and the scheme carried out even to the smallest detail. Over 35 tons of plaster of paris were used in the construction of the houses and the exterior of the full ring. The entire "set" is over 40 feet high and covers over 300 feet of ground and is shown in but one scene.

SLAMS SUCTION PUMP METHOD IN CHURCHES

Noted Protestant Officer Scores Present System of Raising Funds for Church Work.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Chicago, Nov. 20.—The "suction pump method" of raising money for church purposes is wrong, according to a statement made by William A. Van Bokkelen, treasurer of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of California, and published here today by "The Veteran Preacher," a Methodist Episcopal journal. It was announced that the statement was made by Mr. Van Bokkelen as representing the views of William Ford Nichols, D. D., Episcopal bishop of California. It follows in part:

"It is a fundamental principle of human nature that no employee can render good efficient service and the most effective service of which he is capable, whose mind is distracted from his work by the thought of how he shall make ends meet on the salary he receives. As he advances in age and approaches the dead line, he is further distracted by the thought that he is to become of him and those dependent on him when compelled to relinquish even his meager compensation."

"Of no profession or occupation is this truer other than that of the clergyman, yet is none of which more is expected. Young men full of religious enthusiasm, feeling themselves called of God, enter the ministry. In the vigor of youth they are ready to deny themselves all the creature comforts of life which are open to them in other walks of life, only to find that the world is ready and willing to accept the sacrifice. The world in many lines of work is recognizing the necessity of making provision for the care of its superannuated employees as a right and a grudging charity, and the Church at last is awakening to the same fact and is providing an old age pension for its aged and infirm, not an uncertain charity dependent on annual appeals."

"The suction pump method of raising money for church purposes by special appeals is totally wrong. The people should be taught their duty as stewards. Appeals are good in their way, in arousing men to their duty, but they are deficient, first in gripping the individual man with a sense of his responsibility for the use of what God had given him, and second in getting into his consciousness and conscience the feeling that his responsibility is to be squared with God rather than with any appeal or partitionment in other words, that the personal religion needs some systematic plan for giving more than any church or beneficial cause needs money.

"True giving is not by good but for God. The church should enter upon the propaganda to impress upon the conscience of every man and woman that it is his and her duty to canvass prayerfully the stewardship of the goods and determine what portion it is his or her duty to set aside for the relief of others and the services of God; that as occasion requires to freely give with judgment, not as a necessity but as a pleasure for a duty performed."

"Let the church assume the duty of impressing on its people this duty of stewardship, and instead of appeals for special purposes, a mere statement will open up the officers and the people will respond with joy that an occasion has been offered."

THE GAZETTE'S MOTORIST PROBLEM DEPARTMENT

(Published Saturdays.)

Motorist Department, The Gazette.
Are the rear wheels of an auto set parallel axle shaft? At 90 degrees with the front wheels? Also explain "toe in" and "toe out" and how they are applied to the front wheels.

The rear wheels on some cars are given a set, that is, the distance between them on the ground is less than it is at the axle. This is supposed to reduce the strain on the axle-point. This is more noticeable in chain-driven cars. The usual construction in shaft-driven cars is to align the wheels parallel and at right angles to the axle. The term "toe in" as applied to the front wheels means that the front of the wheels is closer together than the rear as measured through hub centre on a line parallel to the ground.

Motorist Department, The Gazette.
Will you kindly explain what is meant by backing? W. B.

Backing usually implies that the ignition takes place in the dead centre of the compression stroke, the spark plug produces a backfire, and the engine is supposed to backfire or otherwise injure the arm.

The term "back firing" is also applied to an explosion occurring in the cylinder during the intake stroke of the piston. This is caused by the gas in the intake manifold being ignited by the spark plug. Should gasoline be near the carburetor it may cause a serious fire.

Motorist Department, The Gazette.
My engine runs on all four cylinders regularly, but does not seem to have as much power as it used to have. Can you let me know some of the things that might cause such a condition?—O. F.

The most common cause is poor compression in the cylinder. If the carburetor is adjusted to give either too rich or too lean a mixture, less or more power will result. Should the bearings of an engine be set too tight the same trouble will result, due to the additional friction, as it will also do when the valves do not close and transmit to the rear wheels the full engine power. Brake rods sometimes get out of adjustment, causing the brake bands to rub on the drums of the wheels, even when the brake is not applied.

Motorist Department, The Gazette.
I have a motor question to ask for publication in your paper. I have a 1914 Ford car with a 16-horsepower engine, and since then it has been very clean, and can only drive a mile or two before the water boils. The mechanic who did the work claims that it is the very best of being tight. And then shortly after the trouble will stop. I had no such trouble when I first bought the car. I am sure it is a long time with it in this condition.

Now you suggest what might be the cause of the trouble and is it advisable for me to start on a long trip with it?—M. T.

Either the valves are timed wrong or else the magnet is timed late. More than likely you are running on a late spark, which will cause the water to boil. Does not check up both the valve timing and the ignition timing. If these are set right, you should have no trouble with overheating.

Motorist Department, The Gazette.
Will you kindly enlighten me as regards the four cycles of a motor? What is the meaning of same? Hoping you will explain the above and thanking you in advance.

The so-called "four cycles" of a motor consists of the suction stroke, the compression stroke, the firing stroke, and the exhaust stroke.

The suction or down stroke of the piston takes in the charge of gas, the compression or upstroke of the piston compresses the charge, then the spark is introduced and the ignition or power stroke stroke of the piston forces the exhaust or upstroke of the piston forces the cylinder of the products of combustion and then repeats.

While the term "cycle" means a completion of events, nevertheless, in its application to the gasoline engine, each stroke of the piston is a cycle, and the four-cycle engine, meaning four operations in the delivery of one power impulse.

Motorist Department, The Gazette.
What is the cause of knocking in the engine when driving up grade on high speed? The spark plug is suddenly known as a cycle; hence the four-cycle type engine, meaning four operations in the delivery of one power impulse.

Several causes: (a) Compression cylinders; (b) spark too far advanced; (c) gas knock due to wrong mixture. If

HELPFUL HINTS.

There is a right way and a wrong way to attach skid chains. In the first place, the chain should be installed with the hooks on the outside and away from the tire. If this is not done the hooks will chafe the casing. In the second place the chain should not be hooked up too tightly. If they are hooked up too tightly the chains will work in the high speed and seem to go to work. When this is done the tread is less apt to be loosened.

In order to prevent the silencing of lamp reflectors from tarashing when new in use it is good to give the surface a light coating of oil. This will prevent a little oil from being dissolved. This will form an excellent protection, and is easily washed off with warm water.

Often times trouble is experienced on road work is a universal joint pin on propeller shaft. Where there is no grease in a vicinity a temporary repair can be made by using a bundle of iron wire or a heavy bolt bedded in the yokes of joint, to pass the power to rear axle.

If a motor persists in missing when only a light load is being carried, before you try to adjust the carburetor, try making spark gap a little wider, presuming, of course, that the spark plug is in good condition. On the other hand, if the motor misses when there is a heavy load on board it may be possible to adjust by closing the spark gap slightly.

A disagreeable body squeak may often be traced to the suspension of a fender. If the fastening bolts are not kept tight, the fender will chafe and squeak. The fender should be kept fastened at all times.

The cylinders are carbonized preignition occurs, producing the same effect as a much advanced spark. If the spark is too far advanced the explosive force of the gas acts on the piston before it reaches top centre. The fly wheel momentum is sufficient to continue the stroke, but not enough to overcome the resistance. The pre-ignited charge is manifested by the knock.

A new knock is peculiar to some motors. Just the right mixture is not obtained a knock will manifest itself when motor is accelerated or forced to pull. It is often necessary to change carburetors in order to eliminate a knock of this kind.

Motorist Department, The Gazette.
The other day I was obliged to put my car in a garage in front of my house. I have instructions to have the car washed, but there was considerable mud on it. When I started the car up at night the motor was running freely, but when I went down to get the car the next morning I could not get the motor started. After a while I managed to start, but ran irregularly for a long time. Then all of a sudden the car stopped. As soon as I was in the garage I saw some water got in the engine and caused the trouble. I am anxious to know if such could be the case.

This trouble very often happens when the car is washed by careless men. The hood of the side of the engine, around the water pump, and sometimes the washer will let the water force itself through these points, which are around the axle and the hose. A small amount of water in the magnet will cause a short circuit and give considerable trouble. As soon as the water dries out, however, the trouble disappears. This usually happens after a motor has been washed with water vapors and the short circuit disappears.

Motorist Department, The Gazette.
I have a 1908 touring car. When running fast, according to the speed of the car, I have put new leather facing on the clutch. This has been done. Any information will be appreciated.

When a new leather is installed it must be carefully fitted. It should be faced on a lathe to remove all spots in order to insure a good contact surface. A new leather usually requires several applications of castor oil or pentastar oil in order to get it into a pliable condition. It may be possible that the clutch spring is weak and needs adjusting or possibly replacing.

Motorist Department, The Gazette.
I have a car with a carburetor. When the motor of my car is not running gasoline drips from the carburetor. Can you suggest a way to overcome this waste?

The float in the carburetor may be adjusted too high, causing the valve to be closed too high, thus the valve is not seating properly, and it would be best to replace the old valve. Very often, however, the valve may be reset by tapping lightly, making sure to centre the valve pin at the time.

ARMY WOULD MAKE A DAY'S KILLING DECLARES MAXIM

Hudson Maxim, inventor of War Implements, Gives Address on Preparedness at Kansas City.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 20.—Hudson Maxim, inventor of many implements of war, addressing the Kansas City Commercial Club at its annual dinner here tonight, said that the only way America could be saved from war would be to have a navy big and powerful enough to stand successfully against any other navy in the world and an army big enough to have the country from the horrors of defeat and humiliation, even should our navy be destroyed.

"Our little, poorly equipped army would not be able to offer resistance against the advance of the enemy," Mr. Maxim said. "Our army would make just about one good day's killing."

"Suppose the enemy should land at Boston or New York or at any of the ports of the United States and we could do nothing to prevent the invaders from capturing the entire country between the Alleghenies and the sea within two weeks," Mr. Maxim said. "The only way to prevent this is by a European power at the conclusion of the present conflict."

"Any one of the great warring nations, if victorious," he said, "would have available several million war-tired veterans for a trial at arms with us, and should that foreign nation be either England or Germany, it would have a navy far superior to our own, and consequently could not be opposed by our Navy. Hence the nation would be able to land upon our shores its legions of trained fighters, equipped with all the paraphernalia and engineering of war as fast as they could be brought over seas."

A quarter of a million men, Mr. Maxim said, could be landed within a month and reinforcements of that number brought over thirty days thereafter, if needed. After they had captured that area, the inventor continued, for America, "there would be but one way out."

"We should have to ransom ourselves with gold and the enemy would throw his sword into the scales and bid Breunns to make good weight. Our captors would take possession of our homes and of our women, for to every household would be detailed a certain number of officers or privates to feed and entertain. You would no

This advertising expression undoubtedly dates back to the beginning of barter and sale, and as a talking point is hard to beat.

The only trouble about its use is that some people are impetuous and want to see the saving quick.

So far as tires are concerned, and if it is the immediate dollar right in hand that is wanted, you can beat Diamond Squegee Tread Tires for a quick saving at the start.

HOW AN ENGINEER KEEPS WELL.
D. G. Dunaphant of Monette, Mo., has run an engine 25 years on the Frisco railroad and the only medicine he ever has taken is Foley's Honey and Tar. Although exposed to heat and to cold more than men in other walks of life. He says: "I always keep it in my house and recommend it to all who have a bad cough or cold." Foley's Honey and Tar cures bronchial trouble, hoarseness, inflamed or tickling throat, opens stopped air passages, heals and soothes and brings normal breathing.

"EVER-LOCT"

Eye Glass and Spectacle Mountings

No Holes—No Screws—Lenses Always Tight.

Reduces Breakage

Neatest in Appearance

"EVER-LOCT" Mountings mean ever tight Lenses—the result is greatest satisfaction to the user.

No Holes—No Screws—Lenses Always Tight.

With the "EVER-LOCT" Mounting you will never be troubled with loose, wobbly glasses. There can be no chipping of the lenses because there are no holes or screws.

The "EVER-LOCT" Mounting holds the lenses by metal tongues which grip like a vise.

This Mounting reduces breakage to a minimum because it does away with either holes or screws through the lenses. It holds the lenses positively tight and tight to stay, hence with the "EVER-LOCT" Mounting your glasses will always remain in the same position as originally adjusted for you.

The old hole and screw method has never been satisfactory. The "EVER-LOCT" system ensures you an Eye Glass or Spectacle Mounting that will lend beauty to the face and forever end all of the annoyances incident to other types of mounting.

The "EVER-LOCT"

Has been perfected in every detail and is the latest—the best in glasses.

"EVER-LOCT" Glasses can be obtained only at The Optical Shop as we have exclusive control of their sale in Southern Wisconsin.

AGRICULTURAL and GARDEN DEPT

ALLEN B. WEST, Director

Question—Please recommend to me a good book for an amateur fruit grower, something that will be useful to anyone raising fruit in the garden for home consumption.

Answer—An inexpensive paper-covered book which the writer has found practical is "Amateur Fruit Growing" by Sam B. Green, professor of horticulture in the University of Minnesota.

This will be found more practical in this region than books written for horticultural men. The writer has found the fruits recommended by Mr. Green are those that have stood the test.

The amateur should also have at hand one or two books on the Management of a Bearing Orchard, by J. G. Moore, No. 207, Common Insect Pests of Fruits in Wisconsin, Moore, No. 190, Spraying the Home Orchard, Midwest Circular of Information No. 12, Strawberry Culture in Wisconsin, Moore, No. 248, Spraying Blueberry No. 19 of Wisconsin Horticultural Society.

If in addition to these helps if the inquirer will join the State Horticultural society, he will receive a helpful little paper once a month called Wisconsin Horticulture, which will give information with reference to the growing of flowers as well as fruit. The fee for joining is 50 cents and entitles one not only to the paper but to the many other advantages of membership. The subscription price of the paper is 25 cents if one does not want to join the society.

Question—Should I have the dirt on the dahlias tubers when I store them in the cellar?

Answer—Authorities seem to differ as to this point, from which it may be inferred that either way will do, if other conditions are favorable. Wisconsin Horticulture says: "Do not shake any more dirt from the clumps of dahlias than is necessary in removing them from the ground." The writer has kept them successfully with the dirt which adheres. The main thing is to keep them cool and dry so they will not get moist and start to grow. If dirt is left on it should be thoroughly dried out before putting away for the winter.

There is a possibility of the roots becoming too dry and the dirt on the roots reduces the danger in this respect. A place that is adapted to the keeping of Irish potatoes is all right for dahlias as far as temperature is concerned. If one has a large quantity to store it might be well to put them on racks or in slat boxes, but for those who have only a few market baskets or bushel sacks will do for keeping them.

Question—When should hyacinths which are intended for winter blooming indoors be brought up from the cellar?

Answer—This depends on when they were put into the cellar. They should be left long enough to form good roots, usually from four to six weeks after they have been brought up at any time and if one wishes a succession of bloom one may bring them to the light a few at a time.

Question—Shall I plow my garden this fall or wait until next spring?

Answer—If you can plow your garden this fall do so by all means, that is, unless it freezes so that it is impossible to plow. It is well to plow late in the fall, but if left too late the frost is likely to interfere with the plowing. It should not be harrowed but left rough so that the frost may puncture the soil and pulverize it.

The Washington Agricultural college of the state of Washington has been doing investigating along the line of spring plowing. As a result the report is that if the plowed land contained on an average 100 times the quantity of available soil nitrates that was contained in spring plowed land or ground unplowed in either fall or spring. If this be true fall plowing certainly pays.

There are circumstances, however, when fall plowing does not improve the texture of the land. If the land is wet and not well drained and the soil is clay, fall plowing does not leave it in good condition. Another advantage of fall plowing is the deepening of cut worms and other pests that spend the winter in the ground, leaving them exposed to killing frosts.

But how the garden is plowed it should be well manured. Twenty-five loads to the acre is none too much. Rich soil gives larger and better vegetables than poor soil, and it gives them earlier for the soil is of such nature that the seeds sprout earlier and plants grow faster. One can get early vegetables one can get just as much more good from his garden than the other fellow whose garden is a month later.

Milk Testing.
Some of the farmers whose sons are taking the agriculture course at the high school have recently purchased testers so that they may be able to test their milk at home instead of depending on the creamery for their tests. The boys have learned much at school as a part of their course and these facts are a practical use of their knowledge. This practical work will be a help to the boys. The high school is glad to give any assistance along this line.

An Experiment in Feeding Hogs.
The department of animal husbandry of the Iowa experiment station has for the past five years been working on a new system of swine feeding. It is called the "free choice" system and is as the name implies a system by which the hog selects his own food according to his individual tastes instead of having balanced ration dealt out to it. In the order of the master, who it is to be presumed has spent a great deal of time and used up a large quantity of gray matter trying to balance a ration for his masterly hog.

This system proceeds on the supposition that each pig is a law unto himself and if provided with suitable food, convenient of access, it will select its needs so wisely that it will excel in weight—and weight is what one's after, when one is working with pigs.

A bulletin will soon be issued setting out the facts of the experiment which will be watched with interest. The Breeder's Gazette of Nov. 15 gives an interesting discussion of the subject under the title, Free Choice System of Swine Feeding.

Bloat in Cows.
The same Breeder's Gazette gives the result of a recent experience with bloat in a cow. The cow had been picketed on alfalfa when she was discovered to be bloating. She was promptly found but she was standing. The owner got her a pin of oar from the can, put it into a bottle and turned in down the cow. The gas began to come in three or four minutes and in half an hour the bloat was gone.

Lions' Chief Industry.
The ancient city of Lyons, the third city in France, with a population of 500,000, vies with Milan in importance in the world's silk industry. No fewer than 40,000 people—men, women and children—are employed in the factories.

"What?" he shrieked, "what? You damned Johnny! You tenderfoot! I'll— And he flung himself forward. A smooth, black muzzle came forth and pushed its brazen menace into his face.

"I'll shoot the first man that attempts to pass me," said Sandry hoarsely.

Raving and cursing, he backed away. More than one of the fourteen begged to be allowed to pass, and one of the lumberjacks from Sacramento muttered deliriously of calling his bluff. But the awful moments dragged by and Sandry stood at the entrance. The flames passed all measurement of light and heat. He lost sight of the figures at his feet. He felt himself going out in the darkness.

"Siletz," he muttered, "little Siletz—"

When he came to himself again, men were crawling across him. He could breathe better and the light had lessened. He sat up, wincing at the moving of his scorched skin over the muscles underneath, crawled out with the rest and one by one they rose to their feet. The great timber of the East Belt farther down stood serried and green. The effort had not been in vain. The holocaust was checked, the Belt was safe.

Back toward the north stretched a forest of tall, black spikes, picked out here and there by heavy spots of fire where fallen logs, dry and pitch-laden, burned steadily. The green canopy was gone, every vine and bit of brush, every sapling and fern. Only a thin edge still crackled and snapped with streamers of flame along the trench.

"Mr. Sandry," said Harris, the saw-filer, "if you're an Easterner I hope to God the bread fills up the country!"

He extended a hand which Sandry grasped.

"An' me," said Murphy, his grimy features distorted in an expression of mingled gratitude and contrition, "I take it all back—every damn word I ever said against you, an' it's a long list."

"Forget it," said Sandry. He was no longer Johnny Eastern. He had won his right to live and fight among them. "Is it over, Collins?" he asked, steadying his voice.

"Over? Look yonder. Feel th' wind. It's changin' again. Th' fire's back-crawled toward the Siletz basin three miles, I'll bet, while we've been savin' this end. We've only begun to fight."

CHAPTER XXVII.

The Shot in the Hills.

At camp they met a party, headed by the foreman, just starting out in search of them. Their absence had been discovered only when Daily, coming in from the north, where his work had been laid out, had asked for Sandry.

At sight of him the three women standing together at the foot-log gave evidence, each in her way, of those emotions which the suspicion of his fate had stirred.

On Ma's face was an unbounded pride that he had come through, a man of parts, abundantly able to care for himself among a harder crew. On Miss Ordway's there lay a vast relief, while Siletz played with the collar of her blue shirt with trembling fingers and moistened her dry lips.

Sandry turned and looked up at the darkened east with a profound joy. He swept his eyes north to where the red heaven flared and staggered to his office.

"Three hours, ma," he croaked in a voice of warning, "only three hours sleep for all of us. If you give us longer I'll never forgive you."

It was true, as Collins said, that they had only begun to fight.

Through the hours, days, nights that followed the saving of the East Belt they took no note of time. Up along the blackened, devastated valley the soldiers moved their camp. Ma Daily shut the cook-shack and, suborned a wagon to haul her big range up and deposit it alongside the camp stoves of Company H, where she dispensed coffee to her men and all others with impartial zeal. Miss Ordway, her skirts tucked up from the contamination of the burned earth which rose in hot, black puffs at every moving foot, was compelled to help if she would hold that espionage over Siletz from which she hoped to realize her ambition. A bitter hatred sharpened her blue eyes upon the girl, and she ached to seize her and tear out of her blouse that packet of proofs. She was angered at herself that all her cleverness had failed to recover them before this.

So the hours passed with smoke and heat and a sun like a copper shield. Men came and went in relays, sleeping upon the ground for short shifts, rigidly apportioned and observed. The flood of flame, runner after an ardent wind, had piled its forces in leaping billows in among the northern hills. It seemed a thing of irresistible might, but the tailworn men hung to its flank with a dogged persistence, emboldened and encouraged by the success on the east ridge.

Sandry, limping painfully, and haggard as a ghost, stuck with the vanguard despite Ma's commands and Daily's warnings. At each fresh sight of his face the girl Siletz was wrung with anguish. It seemed as if he could bear no more and yet the spirit in him drove him on.

Once she ventured a timid protest. "What is the timber worth if you die?" she asked plaintively, and Sandry, still somewhat of a boy, parried the yearning question.

"Who would care?" he laughed wryly, "would you, Little Squaw?"

The girl did not answer, but as she turned away the ready mist sprang to her eyes and he reached a contrite hand to her shoulder.

"Forgive me! I know you would!"

It seemed to Siletz as the horror swept north and the men were lost for hours in the dim fastnesses, that something was about to happen.

She felt a prescience of disaster which Coosmah shared, and they two stood apart for long spaces of time, silent, listening, the muscles of each drawn taut. From time to time the great mongrel would squat upon his haunches, lift his heavy muzzle toward the dun-smoke heavens and bay with a long-drawn, silver note that was the very acme of melancholy.

And then came a dawn when no one came in for breakfast, when the sun, coming over the ridge to the east, was not visible. Only a pale light turned the heavy canopy to shadowed pearl. The three women waited in that silence which ever attends the waiters for men who face danger. They were used to the silence, for there was no accord between them. Ma Daily had long ago shut this "bird of th' earth" out of her good heart and Siletz hated her with the fury of the woman whose mate is threatened.

At last a solitary Indian came down the valley, running, his mouth full of excitement and dolorous prediction. The whole of the Siletz would go. It was the wrath of the Great Spirit turned loose upon a wicked world. It was the judgment. There was nothing like it. He fell into jargon and reverted to the ancient gods, and Siletz checked him sternly.

"What do you mean, Quanna?" she said, "have you forgotten the Preacher and the Bible? There is only one God and he holds us in the hollow of his hand. It is not the destruction of the world. It will stop. What more has happened, and where is Sandry of the camp?"

Everything had happened. The whole country was afire. Not only a ridge or two, a valley in between, as it had been here, a day, two days back, but ridge after ridge, valley after valley—the world, the earth, the heavens. Sandry was somewhere up behind the Hog Back.

For a moment the girl looked out across the slough, lying like a dirty ribbon between its gray and witted banks. Then she turned troubled eyes to the general.

"Mother," she said, "I know it now. There's danger to Sandry, and I'm going."

"Child, you're wrong this time. Sandry's a man. Well as you know th' hills I can't let you go. I forbid it."

They faced each other a moment while Siletz tossed back her braids and tightened her belt.

"I'm going," she said quietly. Ma Daily, who had raised her, said no more; but as she turned to the stove aimlessly—as was her wont in every time of trial, there was a deeper line about her tremulous old mouth.

Swift as the wind the girl ran down the valley toward the deserted camp. Miss Ordway watched her and against her will, drawn by some subtle excitement, some urging power, she, too, gathered her skirts and began to run across the puffing ashes. At the lean-to she came upon the other just leading out Black Bolt, a shining beauty, eager for the turf.

"I'm going too," panted Poppy, reaching for a bridle that hung behind the bay.

Siletz had always ridden bareback, but now, why she did not know, she took down Sandry's saddle and slung it on Black Bolt. Poppy followed her movements, and by the time Siletz had put foot in stirrup and swung up, she had caught up her wide skirt and mounted. Siletz flared around at her and her eyes were beginning to sparkle in a face pale with rage.

Without a word they galloped up across the lonesome valley and took to what had once been a trail in the nodding ferns. Now it was but a slight depression running amid the blackened trunks, the endless heaps of ashes. Poppy Ordway followed Siletz, on a chance, a dare, a mere hazard. She did not know the danger, the menace of the hills.

She was saying to herself after her enticing habit of self-communion: "I'll have my precious packet soon. I know I shall. The gods are with me. I feel it."

Once Siletz turned upon her. "Go back!" she cried fiercely, "something is about to happen."

"You're right," said Poppy, and for once the hardness of her nature showed like a rock under waves in eyes and voice and manner, "and I'll be in at the happening."

They spoke no more. Siletz checked Black Bolt in another mile, rose in her stirrups and looked over the appalling spectacle before them. Over and beyond lay the tumbled hills, thick with heavy timber, that ran into the Siletz basin. Somewhere in their fastnesses reared the mighty spine of the Hog Back with its secret trail. And somewhere up behind the Hog Back was Sandry. Calm as she was by nature, Siletz shuddered as she looked upon the world of flame and smoke. To Poppy Ordway, ignorant of its meaning and its might, it was a splendid spectacle.

Siletz plunged down the ridge on the other side and the woman followed. The shadows of the smoke-filled valley grew into an uncanny twilight. The fine, light ashes made ellipses going and more than once Black Bolt slipped, to catch his footing, catlike. They rode ahead and entered the fire belt itself. The dusk grew denser. The heat lay like a tangible blanket in the hollows and dips. Siletz urged Black Bolt. Something was calling out of the gray dimness—chilling her heart, hurrying her progress.

She had ridden for a time in deep thought when a scream from the woman behind drew her up with a start. She turned just in time to see the big bay fall and go tumbling down the mountain. With his first lurch he had flung his rider out of the saddle and into a pile of ashes. It was true to her nature that the girl, dismounting, ran, not to the woman but down the slope after the horse. She found him prone and groaning in a little trench, his right foreleg doubled back, the white bone piercing the earth.

Poppy Ordway peered fearfully down, her trembling hands gathering her dust-covered skirts.

"Come here!" Siletz cried, commanding; "come here!"

It was the same voice, whimpering with primitive rage, that had compelled that craven "Sandry" from Poppy Ordway's lips that night at the pump, and as the woman had obeyed then, so she obeyed now.

Siletz rose, reaching in the blouse of her shirt, and brought out a gun. Poppy Ordway shrank back, white as chalk.

"What do you mean?" she cried shrilly, "what are you going to do?" Horror widened her blue eyes grotesquely.

"I never shot a living thing in my life," said Siletz solemnly, "but I've got to kill him. And you stand by to watch—it's your work."

There was a sharp report that did not echo in the fire-deadened hills, and the good horse closed his eyes in sudden peace. Siletz turned away to where Black Bolt looked on with wonder, Coosmah crouching beside him. In a swift revulsion she flung the weapon far down the mountain.

She started to mount without a glance at the woman when the other spoke.

"What am I to do?"

"Do? I don't care what you do. Go home. And I hope you never reach there!"

"My God!" cried Poppy Ordway, "don't leave me like this! And look! Look there!"

All along the valley by which they had come a long, swift drift of smoke was rolling, sent out like a current from some newly fired cross-canyon. Its low-lying pall formed a bewildering mystery to anyone save a native of the hills. A woman on foot would never reach camp through its blinding darkness.

Long Siletz sat turned in her saddle and looked at it. Then a thought of Sandry and his standards pierced the emotions that dominated her. There was but one thing to do.

"Come up," she said at last, "I'll have to take you."

Molly and Minnie were two little girls who had been very carefully brought up. Particularly had they learned that they must never tell a lie—not even a "white" lie—nor deceive any one.

One day these girls met a large cow in a field they were crossing. They were much frightened and stopped, not knowing what to do. Then said Minnie: "Let's go right on and pretend we're not afraid of it."

But Molly's conscience was wide awake. "Wouldn't that be deceiving the cow?" she objected.

The Next Mistress of the WHITE HOUSE

Mrs. Norman Galt, the President's Fiancee, Cynosure of All Eyes—A Woman of Rare Personal Charm, Intellect and Local and Business Ability—Family Old Virginia One.

Copyright, 1915, by International Syndicate.

WHO AND WHAT and WHERE is Mrs. Edith Bolling Galt, of Washington, D. C., fiancée of the President of the United States and "first lady of the land-elect"? asks practically every woman—and not a few men—in the land during these strenuous engagement days when the eyes of the entire nation threaten to be permanently crossed from an effort to focus them simultaneously on the Executive Mansion and the comfortable looking residence where the prospective bride makes her home.

"Is she pretty? Is she young? How did the President meet her? Does she care for society? And what will she do with her jewelry business?" are among the countless queries about the coming marriage of the two whose daily doings almost take precedence in the papers over the European war.

A Practical Woman. To answer them systematically, then, Mrs. Galt is the widow of Norman Galt, who belonged to a very substantial Washington family whose jewelry shop has stood throughout the country for all that was reliable in silver and gold and precious stones.

That she is a splendid business woman was evidenced when, at the death of her husband about eight years ago she proceeded to assume virtual management of "Galt's" and to carry it on most successfully. Although employing a manager, Mrs. Galt, until the great calamity of publicity was turned upon her every move—gave personal attention to the books of the firm, going downtown every workday morning in her now famous little electric for that purpose.

Her house on Twentieth street is a four-story, bay window type with nothing in its exterior except a graceful climbing vine, to distinguish it from several others in the block—that is, until her engagement to the President was announced. Nowadays it is most generally distinguished during the afternoon and evening calling hours and the tea hours and dinner hours and morning driving hours by the presence of White House motor cars, and at all hours by a fringe of ever varying curious humanity, which "watches and waits" in perfect accord with the Chief Executive's own policy and speculates and wonders and is sometimes rewarded by a vision of Mrs. Galt in one of her numerous perfect symphonies of gray, or black, or mauve, as she descends the steps, gallantly aided by the President.

Mrs. Norman Galt, the President's Fiancee

Did Her Own Marketing.

The very early curbstone crowd obtained—until the past week—a much more democratic view of her as she came out unattended, entered her electric and started off for Centre Market to buy the table supplies. For Mrs. Galt had lived so long the simple, unostentatious, unfashionable life of a busy woman of affluence (all accounts agree that her fortune is about $300,000) who chose her friends because they were agreeable rather than for political, financial or social reasons, such as actuate a number of hostesses in Washington, that she has found it difficult to accustom herself to changed conditions.

Formerly if she cared especially for a frock—and what woman is there from queen to scullery maid who does not have such preferences? she could just wear it all she wanted but now, when each costume in which she appears is telegraphed in every direction to the land's end and it becomes necessary to give more thought to clothes than a woman of Mrs. Galt's intellect would otherwise think worth while.

Luckily for her she was born with a gift for dressing. She knows by instinct what best suits her graceful style and, having been one of a Southern family early learned enough about sewing to be perfectly well aware of the cut and fit and texture and ensemble of a toilette.

Handsome, Well Groomed.

But clothes do not make Mrs. Galt; she has personality and with her abundance of glistening brown hair, limpid blue eyes and well proportioned figure rather lends distinction to her clothes. She is decidedly good looking with an exquisite complexion and nice teeth and a lovely neck and arms. There is about her an atmosphere of "homeliness" and of an even, equable temperament and utter lack of nervousness. The many people in Washington who have been wondering how Mrs. Galt will acquit herself at the formal White House affairs should know that she will be dignified and thoroughly at ease at all times.

As to the circumstances of when and how President Wilson became acquainted with his future wife there is such a varying collection of theories to choose from that the real facts must remain known only to the White House circle and Mrs. Galt's family. Some have it that they met last autumn and immediately became good friends; others insist that while Miss Wilson and Miss Helen Bones met Mrs. Galt then in the spring.

The Galt Jewelry Store on Pennsylvania Ave. Washington, D.C.

Residence of Mrs. Galt 1508 Twentieth St. N.W. Washington, D.C.

Whether the introduction was made at the Galt home or whether at the White House is also matter for conjecture. All that really matters being that they met, they loved and they are to marry. One point well worth consideration is that the bride-to-be is setting a fashion many future brides might well emulate—that of trying to be interested in whatever appeals to her betrothed.

Her "Athletic Instructor."

Although some space writers have tried to give an impression that Mrs. Galt had gone in extensively for athletic games and sports it develops that she has been attending the baseball and learning golf only since her friendship with the President began. He has been her instructor in both those diversions and her enthusiasm is therefore all the more to be praised.

From the day the engagement was announced President Wilson and Mrs. Galt have been almost hounded by photographers and reporters and motored to quaint little Harper's Ferry for a dinner at an inn and to Emmitsburg, Maryland, to lunch with Mrs. Galt's brother-in-law, Sterling Galt. They went with members of both families to New York where a perfectly wonderful engagement ring that Mecca of all lovers—Riverside Drive and the Park; then they rode in a private car to Philadelphia and saw a World's Series baseball game, while a goodly slice of the population saw and cheered them and even heroes of the diamond had to take second place in their hours of glory while the cameras snap shotted and focussed the next "Presidentess" and her beaming fiancé. There have been numerous theatre parties where the happy distinguished pair signified the proverbial lovers' dislike for publicity by preferring seats in the audience rather than a conspicuous box, and where the future Mrs. Wilson received a promise of her coming excited station when the house rose en masse at her entrance and the orchestra played the national anthem.

Ideal Summer Home.

Every engaged man longs to lay the world at the feet of his beloved, but it has been given to President Wilson to accomplish it. This winter the representatives of the world's rulers will pay official homage to the now Mrs. Galt, she will take precedence over every other woman in Washington and in the land; where she goes there will be society. The mere fact of the Presidential car standing before her house sets it above and apart from all other houses.

A veritable palace of a summer home awaits her down by the ocean the next warm season. "Shadow Lawn," at Elberon, which New Jersey admirers of President Wilson have placed at his disposal has a history—it cost even more in the building than its rich owner had anticipated. The interior furnishings represent perfect taste, an international search and a goodly fortune.

Every day Mrs. Galt receives a bunch of rare purple or mauve orchids from the White House conservatories and every day she wears them. There again she is honored beyond the woman who can only have roses or violets, but there also her fine perceptions are revealed—for she sacrifices all color schemes of gowns and hats to these flowers—making the clothes merely neutral backgrounds for the bouquets.

St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, where Mrs. Galt is a Communicant

At the series of musicales which the President's oldest daughter, Miss Margaret Wilson, is to give shortly Mrs. Galt is to receive, thus enabling her to meet gradually the merging political, fashionable and musical worlds. Unlike other brides, who often have to sue for favor in the family of her husband-to-be, Mrs. Galt finds herself receiving every possible attention from the White House circle of relatives, for even before it became suspected that she was to be the second Mrs. Wilson they had learned to admire and like her.

"Home Town" Gifts.

Naturally Mrs. Galt has been accounted to the very best there is in jewels and bric-a-brac and silverware and china and yet it is probable that even her satiated tastes in such things will be stimulated by the wedding presents. And one can imagine that the joint gift which residents of the little town of Wytheville, Virginia, where she was born, and Roanoke, where she often visited and went to school will have a peculiar value in her eyes.

In almost every detail circumstances seem to favor the lovely daughter of a mother who was herself a noted belle and beauty and still retains a soft loveliness of expression and profile which few elderly women possess. Instead of having to go through the ordeal of the first formal affair at the White House alone Mrs. Galt will have the consolation of several other feminine debutantes.

Mrs. McAdoo, daughter of President Wilson and wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, will make her initial appearance as one of "the Cabinet ladies" her mourning last winter having pre-empted her appearance at any State functions. Mrs. Lansing, wife of the Secretary of State, will for the first time be in the receiving line as her husband was not appointed until mid-summer. Mrs. Gregory, wife of the new Attorney-General, is also in the official debutante class so they will share qualms and good looks and admiration and reputations for smart dressing.

No "left-overs" will be possible because the coming White House bride is going to have a wardrobe full of quietly elegant, well chosen costumes, always with every harmonious accessory that simply demands an equal perfection from those about her.

Devout Episcopalian.

Being a devout Episcopalian, while the President is a Presbyterian, many have wondered by which faith the ceremony would be solemnized. Those who have observed the devoted gallantry of the Chief Executive are not wondering at all—they simply KNOW which it will be.

Until about a month ago Mrs. Galt was a communicant of Saint Thomas Episcopal church, but suddenly left there and became a member of the congregation of Saint Margaret's, a small vine-covered structure at the corner of Connecticut avenue and Hancock street. It is a very fashionable and conservative congregation, and it is generally believed that Mrs. Galt plans to be married from there.

One of Nine Children.

The bride-elect is one of nine children, having three sisters and five brothers. Three of the latter reside in Washington. John Randolph Bolling and Julian B. Bolling are connected with the Galt jewelry firm, and Richard Wilmer Bolling being in the real estate business. Rolf E. Bolling, another brother, lives in Panama, where he is the resident manager of a branch of a Washington National Bank. Dr. William E. Bolling, of St. Louis, is a brother, and the sisters are Mrs. Alexander E. Galt, whose husband was a cousin of the late Norman Galt, and was while visiting her sister shortly after leaving the Powell School of Richmond that the then Miss Bolling met her first husband, Mrs. Matthew H. Maury, of Anniston, Alabama, and Miss Bertha Bolling, of Washington, are also her sisters.

As to her age, she has been rated as every age from 38 to 45. Correspondents from Wytheville have stated that in 1894, when at a finishing school, she was 18 years old. But it is a proverb that "a woman is as old as she looks," so that establishes Mrs. Galt as having just passed her 35th birthday. The President gave her a very beautiful and costly diamond-studded wrist watch.

The Boy Scouts' Part in War

How These Boys Whose Order Stands for Peace and Good Will Are Being Used in the Interests in War.

Copyright, 1915, by International Syndicate.

IN a war of any magnitude, if prolonged for any length of time, it is almost certain that draft will be made upon the youth of the land for service in his country's defence. This was true of all the great wars of Europe during the last two centuries and in Napoleon's time in the height of his military success and glory the youth of France rushed to his colors with enthusiasm and bravery, contributing in no small degree to his many and most famous victories. This draft upon the boys was especially conspicuous in our own Civil War, where both the North and the South yielded up, as a willing sacrifice, the flower of their budding manhood to battle for what each thought to be right and almost sacred.

In those days the Boy Scout was unknown in the world. He is known today. There were boys who as members of the army did scout duty for their respective regiments.

The Boy Scout of the present time is a far different individual and his mission is one of peace rather than of war—yet he has been forced into the awful conflict now raging between the civilized nations of Europe, where many of these brave lads have gone to their death in carrying out the orders of the officers.

The Boy Scout movement, which began in England only a few years ago, has spread all over the world—even to the Balkans where one finds the Roumanian boy, the Bulgarian boy and even the Turkish boy going through the same rigid training as the youth of our own land. This training equips them to be helpful in any emergency or crisis. They are taught obedience to orders of superiors, fidelity to duty, loyalty to country, and above all, self-sacrificing devotion to those in distress or danger. These excellent qualities are developed during the formative periods of their lives and in time doing good to others becomes second nature with them.

Royal Scouts.

The Boy Scout movement has the approval of all the European monarchs and many of the Royal children are members of the organization. The two younger sons of King George, the Crown Prince of Belgium, and Prince Humbert, the future King of Italy, belong especially enthusiastic Scouts. The latter, who is the idol of the Italian people, lives up to the letter of the law to such an extent that his tutors declare that he cannot sleep until he has done his good act each day. The Little Crown Prince of Belgium, too, is an ardent Scout and has many opportunities of doing good. During the battle at Liège and the fall of Antwerp, the Boy Scouts did yeoman service in helping the old and infirm refugees to get away from the doomed city.

German Scouts.

In Germany the Boy Scout receives a military training, consequently when he reaches the age of serving his time in the German army he has learned the routine and is practically fit for active service. This training includes camp life in the snow, where they are made to endure all the hardships of a soldier's life. They cook their own food, also prepare a diet below especially for the sick, so that they are able to do hospital work of all kinds—indeed, so thoroughly are these boys trained that were it necessary they could do the army surgeon's first aid work in stopping bleeding from a vein or artery, internal or external, or in diagnosing the kind of fractured limb and binding it in splints.

No task is too menial for the German Boy Scout—if it comes in the line of duty to the Fatherland.

Work Of English Scout.

The English Boy Scout has also been pressed into service, but only in England—for very few have crossed the channel and even those who did have seen nothing of actual warfare. More than 22,000 of these boys are doing service at present. As soon as the war cloud broke over England word was sent from the Chief Scout Sir Robert Baden Powell to every scout headquarters in the United Kingdom that all scouts would be needed in the crisis and within a week thousands of boys were eager and ready for work. All sorts of duties were assigned to the lads, such as the handing out of notices to inhabitants and other duties connected with billeting, warning, commandeering, carrying out communications by means of dispatch riding, signaling and by wireless. In the latter, they are proficient—as this is in the regular curriculum of Scout education. It is no uncommon thing in England to see a wireless squad of Boy Scouts busy flashing out messages to headquarters that a Zeppelin has been sighted or that a French aeroplane is coming or that a certain dispatch has been dropped by an aircraft. They are employed in guarding and patrolling bridges and culverts and telegraph lines against damage by individual spies. They also act as guides and orderlies and to collect information as to supplies and transports. Helping families of men employed in defence duties and aiding their sick and wounded is another duty which the Scouts are carrying out under the most difficult conditions. They have also established soup kitchens for the orphans of soldiers, first-aid dressing stations, nursing stations, refugee and dispensaries. Another set of scouts do coast duty, such as guiding vessels through unbuoyed channels and assisting coast guards in their work.

Loyal French Boys.

The French Boy Scouts have been equally active and in addition to their regular duties they have collected large sums of money for the Red Cross. In this they were ably assisted by Miss Anna Held, the well-known French actress, who returned to France shortly after the war began. She at once gathered a company of Boy Scouts about her and, donning the same kind of a uniform, she marched through the streets of Paris at her head. After the parade she led them in singing patriotic French songs which so roused the enthusiasm of the populace that they gave liberally to the fund for the care of the wounded.

Much can be said of the work of the Italian Boy Scout, who goes into the snowy Alps to succor the sick of the families of the men who are at the front of how they seek out these poor people and oftentimes carry them for miles over the snow to a hospital, using their coats stretched or their staves as a stretcher, and how they watch for spies and keep an eye on strangers who happen to stray into Italy.

Balkan Scouts.

The Turkish Boy Scout has his own peculiar way of doing things. Although his work has merit, it is of a different type from that of the other countries. His teachings are Mohammedan and he follows these precepts. He is intensely patriotic and he helps those who are in distress and ever since the fight of the Dardanelles began the little khaki clad red faced Turkish boy has been working like a Trojan as a messenger and general helper to the Hospital Corps of his country.

Servia, Bulgaria and Roumania.

have boy scouts, those of the latter country being especially picturesque. The Queen of that land is deeply interested in the Scout movement and frequently goes out to see them making stretchers and carrying out first aid to the injured war.

The true Boy Scout, whatever may be his nationality, if he lives up to the rules and regulations of the order will make a good honest man. "As the twig is bent, so the tree is inclined" is an old adage which fits the Scout, for the whole system of teaching is for a useful life and the betterment of the condition of those who are less fortunate.

GERMANY KICKING AND KICKING HARD OVER HIGH PRICES

From Every Part Increasing Complaints Are Made Over the Increasing Prices for Food Stuffs.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Berlin, Oct. 20.—From every part of Germany come in increasing number complaints of the ever mounting cost of living—especially of eating—and coupled with them more and more frequently the charge that the middleman is to blame, and that speculation is the cause of the shortage of food, is resounding. For the middleman is the one who is making the most of the situation, and the middleman is the one who is making the most of the situation, and the middleman is the one who is making the most of the situation.

Butter is up. Butter has been the latest commodity to go up. It had reached a three-mark price (75 cents) figure and was advancing daily when the authorities stepped in and anchored the price at 2 marks, 80 pfennigs, where it still remains. There is, further, a strong agitation for the government to take the butter out of the market and to let it be sold at a price of 2.30 in Saxony; consequently the creamery refused to sell any of its butter at home, but for months had been sending all it could make to the north.

Rabbits scarce. October is the rabbit season in Germany, and it had been anticipated this year particularly, as the people were in need of food. The rabbit is a very appetizing food. When the season opened, however, it was found that rabbits were scarce instead of plentiful, and were to be had only at prohibitive prices—ranging from 1.50 to 2 marks (83¢ to $1.75). It was charged that the middleman had been holding back the supply with intent to increase the price, but that charge is met by the assertion that the number of hunters this year is smaller than ever before and the number of rabbits shot is correspondingly smaller. Hence, by the law of supply and demand, prices have gone up. It is also pointed out that ammunition, guns and equipment for the hunt are dearer than ever.

The recent experience of a Berlin banker indicates that there may be some truth in the charges against the middleman. He purchased a pullet in a Berlin game store at 3.75 marks a pound, his protest being not with the assertion that the farmer's country price was so high that it was impossible to retail the bird for less. Yet the next day he found he was able to buy a similar fowl in a suburb for 1.30. He took both birds to the chef of a big Berlin restaurant and was assured that in weight, quality and every other particular the two were identical.

In Mining Places. In the mining country of western Germany the four largest associations of miners, numbering thousands of members, have felt it necessary to petition the imperial government to make it impossible for the well-to-do to buy up at prohibitive prices all the available meat and fowl. Their petition reads:

"Lately the quantity of meat and fowl offered for sale so far as the great mass of the poorer people is concerned, has greatly decreased. Partly the war is responsible, but it is plain also that the food is being withheld for speculative purposes."

"With the decreasing quantity of food, prices for the foods have risen enormously. The poorer part of the population can no longer afford to buy the enjoyment of meat at all. If the unfavorable developments are not soon checked they will not be able to have fowl. That portion of the population which is financially better off is buying up all available meat and fowl at any price, because it is unwilling to do without them."

Seeks a Reform. "Such a development is bound to have the most unfavorable consequences for our people and our economy. Man needs a certain amount of fat for his nourishment. Especially for that portion of the people which does heavy physical labor is fat indispensable for replacing expended physical strength in order that the one hand, its health may be maintained and, on the other, that it may be kept in condition to do its work continuously. The workers are especially keyed up in a way during the war that makes powerful nourishment imperative. Especially in the case with the miners. A minimum of them must do the utmost possible work. If competent nourishment is not furnished them the work must suffer. Without it is inevitable that the workers will break down, and that their families' health will suffer permanently. This damage must be avoided."

"We ask, therefore, that necessary measures be taken, in order that the supplies of meat and fowl which are essential shall not be used up to too great an extent by the upper and wealthier classes who work less than the miners, and that the necessary quantities of such foods shall be available so as to maintain their working strength."

Proposed Measures. The proposed measures announced by the imperial government for supplying cheap potatoes removes the necessity of going into that subject now. We wish nevertheless to express that urgent wish that the stippling may begin as soon as possible and at low prices.

The petition is signed by representatives of the "Organization of Miners of Germany," the "Trade Union of Christian Miners of Germany," the "Polish Workers' Association, Miners' Division," and the "Trade Union of Miners H.D."

The visible supply of lard in Berlin at least, has become so small that the magistrate has forbidden its further sale to the general public, and has directed that it is to be distributed to worthy poor families, those of soldiers preferred. The National Women's Association is to take charge of the available lard and have control over its distribution.

PRESIDENT'S TYPEWRITER HAS PARALYSIS OF TYPE AND OTHER AFFLICTIONS

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE] Washington, Nov. 20.—When President Wilson writes a message to congress it looks something like this:

In addition to which the machine's alphabet is badly chewed as to legs and shoulders. The space bar suffers from intermittent paralysis. Some of the letters are virtually mute. Others have a black fence of the ribbon is about as fresh and whole as the flag in a museum. The mechanism generally is decrepit, and limps heavily through the affairs of state only under the severest Presidential roading. Mr. Wilson admits it is far from faultless, but he likes it, and he is very proud of the fact that it has no hyphen.

You couldn't get a typewritten line out of the President on any machine but this one—not even with a dark lantern and a jimmie. White House humorists say he has hand-raised the poor old thing so long he has developed a personal attachment for it. If so, that is the only valuable attachment it has.

For years and years the ancient machine has endured professional, authorial and presidential pecking and pecking is right for Mr. Wilson is a disciple of the Hunt system, or forefinger hesitation. Wherefore it may be said that this is the only typewriter that ever had the distinction of having waited with a President. It might be added that this couple is getting ready to lead congress a merry dance this winter while the orchestra plays "O You Preparedness."

The last in a series of the President's repulses in his library. They understand each other's idiosyncrasies and eccentricities and they stand together in their own time to the sublimar, blockades of neutral ports.

DEATHS FROM CANCER INCREASED IN STATE

State Board of Health Gives Figures for Steady Growth in Mortality Rate From Dreaded Malady.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE] Madison, Wis., Nov. 20.—Cancer is on the increase. In common with many other states, Wisconsin's mortality from this fearful malady shows a steady rise. From 1,613 deaths in 1908 to 1,761 in 1914, each year has shown an uninterrupted increase. For the nation as a whole the same condition is true. The average annual death rate from cancer for Wisconsin in the last seven years was 1.67.

Largely because of public ignorance and neglect, declares the state board of health, "cancer now proves fatal to over 90 per cent of the cases." These precautions are suggested by the board in a special cancer bulletin.

"Never be afraid to know the truth. Any painless lump or sore appearing on your body should be examined by your physician."

"The time a cancer has become painful is the best chance for its cure has passed."

"But even a painful cancer can be removed permanently if it has not extended too far beyond the place where it began."

"Medicine which relieves pain does not have any effect upon the disease itself; it simply produces a period of freedom from discomfort and therefore delays the proper treatment."

The latest census statistics (for 1913) show that cancer caused 49,928 deaths in the registration states, the death rate being 78.5 per 100,000 population, as compared with a rate of 77 during the preceding year. In 1909 this rate was down to 63 per 100,000 people. Cancer of the stomach and liver is preponderant, approximately 40 per cent of all deaths from this disease being caused by cancers of these organs. The average age at death was 55.5.

The census reports do not include Milwaukee in a list of large cities where high mortality from cancer prevails. Neither is Wisconsin listed with states of high mortality. Vermont led the states with 111.7 deaths from cancer per 100,000 population.

"Cancer usually begins in some unhealthy spot or some point of local irritation," says the health board's bulletin, "an external cancer there is something to be seen or felt, such as a wart, a mole, a lump or scab, or an unhealed wound or sore. Pain is rarely present. Cancer inside the body is often recognized by symptoms before a lump can be seen or felt. Persistent indigestion, with loss of weight and change of color, is always especially suspicious. The early and hopeful stages of cancer are usually painless."

"Never treat moles or warts with caustic; the whole lesion with its so-called roots should be removed."

"A burn on the tongue or lip from smoking is a source of danger if it does not heal within a few months. If a small ulcer appears on the tongue consult a surgeon at once. Cancer of the tongue is the most malignant form of the disease."

"Beware of that ragged tooth. Consult a dentist, as the ulcer does not heal; it is a surgeon's task."

"Gallstones should be removed. From four to fourteen per cent of all cases are followed by cancer. Gallstone cancer of the uterus is recognized at an early stage the life of the patient can be saved."

"Finally, beware of quack remedies and their bogus testimonials. Many conditions resemble cancer, and behind these, which are not cancer and which would tend to heal without treatment, the cancer specialists take their stand and make their false claims."

This message of hope is given to Wisconsin sufferers:

"The only cure for cancer is to remove every vestige of the disease. The only way to do this is by a surgical operation."

"If taken at the beginning, the majority of cancer cases are curable. All cases will end in death if let alone."

"Records of our best hospitals prove that the chances of cure are very high with early operation, and that these chances decrease with every day of delay."

Evansville News

Evansville, Nov. 20.—Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Baker very pleasantly entertained their friends at a six-thirty o'clock dinner last evening in honor of their thirtieth wedding anniversary. Miss Beth Baker of Madison came down to help them celebrate last night.

The afternoon club held its regular meeting yesterday afternoon, the program being as follows: Reading from American Authors, Hattie Porter; Union States, Mrs. W. C. Colton; Wolfe; The Thanksgiving Dinner, Ellen Spencer; Saving on the Meat Bill, Miss Tuller; John Alexander, Artist and Man, Eva Shashall. Social committee group.

The regular monthly meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held at the home of Mrs. Thompson, on South Madison street, Friday, Nov. 19, at 2:30 o'clock. Mrs. W. C. Colton and her little daughter June visited relatives and friends at Portage this week.

Mrs. Audrey Huddleston left Wednesday for Beloit, where she will visit friends until the first of December. Miss Mae Finn is ill with the measles.

Miss Edith Hoag spent the week end at her home in Milton. Mrs. Fred Garry and daughter Helen are spending a few days at Edgemoor, where they were called by the illness of the former's sister.

UNIQUE ENTERTAINMENT TO BE GIVEN AT FULTON

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE] Edgerton, Nov. 20.—The Social Center of Fulton will give something new in the way of entertainment on Tuesday, Nov. 23. The whole day will be given to a discussion of the new school vs. the old school, with an intermission of two hours, from 11:30 to 1:30, for reunion dinner and social good time. The order of the program will be as follows: Meeting in the church from 10:30 to 11:30, will be given to the principal discussion of the subject for debate. "Resolved, that the system of teaching in the common schools of today is better adapted to the needs of the pupils than the system in use forty years ago." This part of the debate will be handled by two speakers on the affirmative and two on the negative. Dinner at 12 o'clock in the hall. A charge of twenty-five cents will be made for the dinner, the proceeds to be used to fund to purchase a piano for the social center. The program will be taken up again at the church and each side will demonstrate the truth of their arguments by class work in the fundamental branches of reading, arithmetic, writing and spelling. The spelling class will take the form of a spell-down between the scholars of forty years ago and those of the modern school.

A unique feature of the program will be that the old school at Fulton of forty years ago this winter will be represented by the teacher and about twenty of the scholars of that school. G. H. Mumrill, as teacher, will defend the negative, while Miss White principal of the present Fulton school, with her assistants and scholars, will defend the affirmative.

After the rebuttal and discussion of the judges, the subject will be thrown open to a general discussion. It is hoped that not only the people of Fulton community, but those of the surrounding communities, will be present, as we are planning on a grand good time and reunion of old scholars and a program of vital educational importance.

Whitewater, Nov. 20.—The Whitewater Lecture Course opened last evening with a concert by the Dolejsi Bohemian Orchestra. The course opened with the largest seat sale in many years and the concert was exceptionally good.

At a special meeting of the Royal Neighbors last evening at the Woodman hall, sixteen candidates were taken in the lodge, mostly beneficial. There was a large attendance of the local members, including thirty from the Fort Atkinson lodge, who came as invited guests. Eva Child, chairman of the Board of Supreme Managers of the Royal Neighbors, lodge deputy, who was instrumental in getting up the class that was taken in, from Footville, and Clara Hoyt, field worker, of Horicon, who is working in Palmyra, were also present. Following installation and a banquet, a banquet was served in the dining room, at which about 100 partook.

ALLIES FAIL TO PREVENT SERB DEFEAT

INVADERS ADVANCING

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, Nov. 20.—Although no official confirmation has been received of the report that the Bulgarians have captured Monastir, in southwestern Serbia, little hope is felt in England that the announcement is premature. Accepting it as true, the impression is growing that the entente allies arrived too late to give any service to the Serbians.

The only thing certain in regard to Serbia is that its military situation is going from bad to worse. In the north the main Serbian armies are giving way slowly before the battering Austro-German forces, which probably will move more rapidly if weather conditions were better. It is established that the Bulgarians are in Pilep and at least have made Monastir untenable. The Anglo-French armies, based on Salonika, seem to do no better than hold their position.

Optimistic Over Greece.

Optimistic feeling in regard to the diplomatic situation in Greece still exists. The neutral position for this optimism, however, continues to be obscure.

The weather seems to have intervened again in Russia. Little activity is reported except the movement of the Russians to the east bank of the Sire in Galicia. In Courland wet weather in the swampy district evidently has brought sides to a standstill.

On the other fronts there has been few changes. Desperate fighting continues between the Austrians and Italians. In Mesopotamia General Nixon is reported to be in sight of Bagdad.

Serbs Still at Monastir.

An Athens dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company filed Friday says Serbian troops at Monastir succeeded yesterday in advancing to a distance of about four and two-thirds miles.

The reference to the Serbian advance at Monastir is rather cryptic. Unofficially it is said that the town had been occupied by the Bulgarians. The "advance" may have been made before the town finally was abandoned, or may mean that Monastir is still in possession of the Serbians.

Bulgarians Advancing.

Amsterdam, Nov. 20.—An official statement received here from Sofia, the date not given, says that Bulgarians operating in the Balkans of Presina have occupied Gila, breaking through the line of the retreating Serbians.

2,800 Serbs.

Berlin, Nov. 20.—Announcement was made at the war office today of the capture of 2,800 more Serbs.

Quiet at Dardanelles.

Constantinople, Nov. 20.—Comparative quiet now prevails on the Gallipoli peninsula following the offensive movement undertaken by the British earlier this week. An official statement issued here today chronicles only minor engagements.

On the Dardanelles front, artillery firing on both sides is in progress with the British army continuing to participate during a violent downpour on the night of November 13, two landing bridges of the enemy were destroyed. One tug boat and nine large barges were destroyed.

Our artillery destroyed a bomb throwing and machine gun position near Karli Dere. At Sedul Babr the enemy continually threw bombs at our trenches in the night.

French Fire on Allies.

Berlin, Nov. 20.—According to a report from Salonika received in Constantinople, the French troops at one point on the Serbian front, fired on Serb troops, whom the French mistook for Bulgarians.

The lava is flowing down the side of the mountain into the sea.

WILL TEUTONS ATTEMPT TO TAKE EGYPT?

Territory across which the Teutonic allies would have to pass in an attack on Egypt from Constantinople.

Now that the Teutons have hacked their way through Serbia and made the way clear to Constantinople, will they attempt to press on and attack Egypt? War experts believe not, as the distance to be traversed is too great.

CORNER STONE FOR NATIONAL MCKINLEY MEMORIAL IS LAID

Tribute Is Paid to Ex-President by National Famed Speakers at Niles, Ohio, in Fitting Ceremony.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Niles, O., Nov. 20.—The corner stone of the National McKinley Birthplace Memorial was laid here at noon today with ceremonies reminiscent of the former president's life. "Lead Kindly Light," the hymn which clung to the murdered president in his dying moments, and the "Strauss Waltz," "The Beautiful Blue Danube," a favorite of McKinley's, were played by the United States Marine Band, and James H. Hoyt, an intimate friend of the former president, recited personal reminiscences. At the conclusion of the program Major Charles B. Hanford, head of the Marine band, declaimed "The Star Spangled Banner," a bit of eulogy which McKinley was wont to request in his White House days.

President Wilson was forced to decline an invitation to lay the corner stone but he sent a representative of the national administration and promised to be present at the dedication of the building later. Other guests of the day included Senators Atlee Pomerene and Warren G. Harding of Ohio; Representative William A. Ashbrook of Johnstown, Ohio; J. G. Schmidlap of Cincinnati, one of the trustees of the memorial fund; Gov. Frank Willis of Ohio, Myron T. Herrick of Cleveland, former ambassador to France, and L. C. Dyer of St. Louis, a member of congress and commander of the United States Veterans; Gov. Willis, Mr. Herrick and Congressman Dyer being the principal speakers.

The day's program began with a parade in which state troops, veteran organizations, Masons and other organizations in which McKinley was interested took part. Camps of Spanish War Veterans and posts of the Grand Army of the Republic from Cleveland, Alliance, Canton and Akron, and Pittsburg, Sharon and the Castle Park, were in the line of marchers. Half a dozen bands made music for the parade.

After the Masonic part of the program a tablet was affixed to the stone, bearing this inscription:

ERECTED 1915.
"To Perpetuate the Name and Achievements of William McKinley, Twenty-ninth President of the United States of America."
BORN January 29, 1843.
DIED September 14, 1901.

The building itself when completed will be a two story structure of severe colonial design flanked by one story wings of almost equal length with the main structure. The main portico is to be supported by six Ionic columns and the facade of each wing will carry as many similar supports in sectional form. The cornice will be a simple structure. The main portico and windows will emphasize the straight lines of the design.

STARTS ACTION AGAINST RAILROAD CAFE AT MADISON

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Nov. 20.—Attorney General Owen has started an action against the Northwestern cafe of this city under the women's hours of labor act to collect $1,000 in fines, for alleged violation of the law. It is charged in the complaint that he worked many of the dining room girls over time. Three of them made a complaint to the industrial commission for relief and the evidence was then certified to the attorney general's office for action. Mr. Owen served the complaint on Mr. Gans, the manager of the cafe, yesterday.

S. O. S. CALL OF ANCONA RUSHED AID

Operator Tells How Steamer France First Wired of Being Torpedoed But Liner Found No Trace of Wreckage.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York, Nov. 20.—Fresh and dramatic details of what happened in the Mediterranean on the morning of November 9 when the Ancona was torpedoed by a submarine flying the Austrian flag, were brought to New York today by the Italian steamer Giuseppe Verdi, on her maiden voyage.

Rushed to Aid Ancona.

The Verdi heard the Ancona's wireless death cry, flashed it on to shore stations, which the feeble batteries of the sinking steamer could not reach, and then rushed at full speed to the Ancona's aid, her boats swung outward, her passengers lined on the deck and her officers, momentarily expecting a death blow themselves from submarines known to be lurking nearby. The Verdi steamed as near as she dared to the spot where the Ancona went down, but her lookouts saw nothing. Then turning swiftly she fled for Gibraltar and security.

Luigi Moroni, the youth at the key of the Verdi's wireless, told the story here today.

"We were about 200 miles out from Palermo, watching for submarines which we had been told were nearby on the morning of the seventh," he said. "At twenty minutes past nine, I got a sign 'S. O. S. France, Submarine,' the message said then 'Help.' This was followed by the France's position and then there was nothing more."

"I relayed France's Message," he continued. "Captain Zannoni and I relayed the France's message at once to shore wireless stations at Bzerta and Cape Soperon. The 'Alps' that relayed the message brought back word from shore stations that torpedo boats were on the way to help the France, and get the submarine. Captain Zannoni altered the course of the Verdi to go to the spot where the France would avoid the France. He had reason to believe the submarine that attacked the France was lying in wait for us, the Verdi was a new ship on her maiden voyage."

"We exchanged several other messages with the relayed ships concerning the France and submarines, and while we were talking, the Ancona's wireless station was broken. I looked at the clock. It was half past ten. 'S. O. S. S. O. S. Ancona,' we got. The Ancona gave her position. I sent this message to shore stations as I went to the upper deck a few moments after I had stopped the shore station sent back an answer.

"Go to the Ancona," it said.

"Prepared to Quit Ship," Captain Zannoni swung his ship right about and gave orders for full speed. Then he called the passengers upon the deck. At first he did not tell them what he had heard, but soon decided it was better to do so. After this was done, the torpedo boats came to run with provisions, water and life bits to the small boats. These were quickly loaded with emergency supplies and swung out on their davits. The passengers then were assigned to the boats, every man, woman and child being given a number. They were then asked to be prepared to leave the lifeboats, as we did not know when a submarine would fire a torpedo into the Verdi.

"It was ninety-four miles to the Ancona, and we made it at top speed. I tried several times to get the Ancona by wireless, but she didn't answer. Afterwards we learned she was shot away by the submarine."

Found No Trace.

"The captain went to the case to the Verdi, and doubled the lookout. We slowed down and tried to find the trace of the Ancona or her boats, but they failed to do so. Then we turned about and steamed away. We didn't want to stay there too long and invite attack on ourselves."

Moroni's story was verified by several of the steamer's passengers, among them being Charles P. Terry, American consul at Toronto, Italy.

Rome, Nov. 20.—The American ambassador, Thomas Nelson Page, has collected additional evidence concerning the sinking of the Ancona. It is understood he has established beyond doubt the principal circumstances in the sinking, including the parties responsible for the act.

Was Austrian Submarine.

Washington, Nov. 20.—The Italian foreign office has notified the American Ambassador Page, at Rome, that it has no reason to believe that the submarine which sank the liner Ancona was other than an Austrian. This with the Austrian government's acknowledgment of the act, clears up the last possibility that it might have been a German boat.

Italian Liner Pursued.

Madrid, Nov. 20, via London.—A telegram received here today gives a wireless message, said to have been sent by the Italian steamship Verona, stating that she was being pursued by a large submarine with two periscopes. According to this telegram the submarine is accompanied by a steamer. The position of the Verona was given as latitude 40, longitude 6, off Capri.

VILLA-CARRANZA SPLIT CAUSED BY ELECTION CLAIMS

Present Breach Between Two Mexican Leaders Opened a Year Ago Over Jealousy—Regards Victory.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 20.—The present breach between Carranza and Villa was opened a year ago, by jealousy, rivalry and mistrust. Peace was short lived following Carranza's entry into Mexico City in August, 1914. A month later Villa began his revolt against Carranza, who was supported by General Obregon, General Angeles, military rival of Obregon, sided with Villa.

The Villa-Carranza breach widened when Villa demanded that Carranza proclaim himself provisional president, according to the "plan of Guadalupe," name a cabinet and call elections. Carranza did not do this. It would have disqualified him for the presidency.

The Aguas Calientes convention was then called to mediate. Carranza claimed the convention was packed by Villa delegates planning his overthrow. The convention, in which Carranza was represented, declared Carranza rebel, proclaimed the new conventional government elected Eulalio Gutierrez provisional president. The Villista armies captured Mexico City.

This was the strongest point in Villa's efforts. From this moment his power waned. Carranza and Obregon retreated to Vera Cruz. Villa and Zapata controlled three fourths of Mexico.

Defection of Gutierrez started the disintegration of Villa's power. Gutierrez, outraged by Villa's cruelties and barbarities, he said, left Mexico under the command of Blanco, his counter revolt collapsed. The Conventionists elected Roque Gonzales Garza president. Gutierrez fled to the mountains. Obregon gradually broke Carranza's army. Mexico City was captured and re-captured a half dozen times.

Villa's forces were gradually pushed northward. His most crushing defeat was at Celaya last spring. There in desperate charges he lost 8,000 men. Superstitious belief in his military infallibility was shattered. He never recovered.

Five years ago Carranza was treated the country fields were trampled or devastated. Livestock was confiscated. Famine swept the country. Business collapsed. Villa's army was pushed back to the border.

The President last July made another Pan American move to pacify Mexico by calling representatives of six Latin American countries to aid Carranza. The States Department did not participate and Carranza would not have it.

Apparently a broken reed, the conference recommended recognition of the Carranza government.

At the desperate struggle of Villa at Agua Prieta, opposite Nogales, Ariz., having failed today Carranza is entering upon the reconstruction of Mexico.

PANKHURST'S $200,000 TO GO TO MARY SMITH

"Uncle Jimmie" Now Paving Way to Give Chicago Typist Entire Wealth of Family.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Chicago, Nov. 20.—Mary Smith, the Chicago typist who went to Aubrey, Ill., to be an aid and comfort to the lonely old age of "Uncle Jimmie" and "Aunt Louise" Pankhurst, and who was to receive $10,000 for her services, is now to receive $200,000. Mary L. Crawford, federal immigration inspector here, stated today that he has received a letter from Mr. Pankhurst asking him to take the proper steps to make Miss Smith heiress to the Pankhurst property. The estimated value of the estate is $200,000.

Crawford selected Miss Smith out of hundreds of applicants for the position. The Pankhursts wanted a healthy young woman who would be like a daughter and who would guard to stay with them, unmarried, to the end of the chapter.

Linn W. Price, an assistant United States district attorney, is drawing up a contract designed to secure Miss Smith's right should any relative of the Pankhursts resort to the courts.

THIRTY-FIVE LB. TURKEY TO GRACE WHITE HOUSE BOARD FOR THANKSGIVING

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Nov. 20.—President Wilson will take Thanksgiving dinner with his family and his fiancée, Mrs. Norman Galt, at the White House. A thirty-five pound turkey fattened by South Tremble, clerk of the house of representatives, on his Kentucky farm, will be shipped Monday for the occasion, and it is said the turkey usually will be served on the White House table. The distinction is claimed annually for a flock of a dozen or more from all parts of the country.

MUNDAY ANNOUNCES INTENTION TO FIGHT CASE TO LAST DITCH

Convicted Chicago Banker Seeks a New Trial Following Jury's Verdict at Morris, Ill.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Morris, Ill., Nov. 20.—Counsel for Charles B. Munday, found guilty of conspiracy to wreck the La Salle Street Trust & Savings Company of Chicago, appeared in circuit court today to ask for a new trial.

Munday, the jury agreed, must spend five years in the state penitentiary. He was found guilty last night by the jury, which had deliberated six hours and a half after a trial lasting eight weeks.

"I'll fight this case to the last ditch," was the only comment Munday made when the verdict was read.

The case charged that the assets of the La Salle Street Trust & Savings Bank, of which Munday was vice president, and William Lorimer president, were used to finance other banking and business enterprises. Their financial structure collapsed in 1912. The trial of William Lorimer and Henry W. Huditz, who were among others indicted with Munday, will be started soon after the holidays, State Attorney MacLay Hoyne of Cook county announced.

SIX ARMY AVIATORS MAKING TEST TRIP

First Aerial Squadron of U. S. Army Continues Flight From Fort Sill to San Antonio.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Wichita Falls, Nov. 20.—With the prospect of completing their journey from Fort Sill, Okla., to Fort Sam Houston at San Antonio, three more laps, the six aviators, composing the first aerial squadron of the U. S. army, were ready early today to begin another 144 mile flight from here to Fort Worth, as the second stage of their journey.

The machines were overhauled and re-adjusted last night, and motor cars acting as pathfinders proceeded ahead to find the landing place at the second stopping point. The flight was delayed today over the experience of the trip thus far. Conditions were very nearly approximating warfare prevailing during their flight yesterday. Many different varieties of air currents were encountered and the six machines easily found the landing place selected which none of the pilots had even seen before.

Reach Fort Worth.

Fort Worth, Tex., Nov. 20.—The first of the aviators, in the first army squadron enroute from Fort Sill to San Antonio reached Fort Worth at 11:15 o'clock, covering the 114 miles from Wichita Falls, Texas, in less than two hours.

SPLIT THREATENS LABOR FEDERATION

A. F. of L. Leaders Face Problem of Healing Serious Breach as Convention Closes.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

San Francisco, Nov. 20.—The American Federation of Labor in closing session of its thirty-fifth annual convention today, faced the problem of healing a breach in the union developed at the session last night, and which in the language of officers and delegates threatened the disruption of the organization.

The trouble arose over consideration of a resolution that, had it been adopted, would have meant the loss of 200,000 members of the federation. The resolution offered by the adjustment committee called for the suspension of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, the second largest international union in America, the resolution to withdraw the charter of the carpenters' union was the result of the failure of the organization to refrain from alleged encroaching upon jurisdiction awarded the machine tool makers before the union's attitude toward the federation.

In the course of the debate, Samuel Gompers, president of the federation, said:

"We are not safe from disintegration and failure if we lose sight of the ideals of human brotherhood."

John B. Lennon, opposing the expulsion of the carpenters, said: "We are not safe from disruption."

Andrew Furseth, secretary of the sailors' union of the Pacific coast, declared his belief was that the carpenters' union was determined to leading to compel the federation to withdraw the charter.

WILSON TO CONFER WITH REPUBLICANS

President Invites Senator Gallinger and Congressman Mann to Talk Over Defense Plans.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Nov. 20.—President Wilson today put into effect his plan to make the right for military preparedness non-partisan. He invited Senator Gallinger and Representative Mann, republican leaders of the senate and house, respectively, to confer with him on national defense before opening of congress. The president expects his plans will be opposed by some democrats, but has been assured by leaders that there is no doubt of passage of the main features.

Just before the opening of congress the president will confer with republican members of the senate and military and naval committees. When he sees Senator Gallinger and Representative Mann, the president will also discuss other legislative questions.

BLEACHERS IN COLLAPSE AT MADISON

SEVERAL PERSONS TAKEN TO HOSPITAL WHEN SECTION GIVES WAY THIS AFTERNOON.

JANESVILLE LADY HURT

Score of Minnesota-Wisconsin Game Stands 3 to 0 in Wisconsin's Favor at End of First Period.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Camp Randall, Madison, Nov. 20.—Twenty-five hundred persons were endangered this afternoon when a section of the bleachers collapsed during the game between the football warriors of Minnesota and Wisconsin universities.

There were no fatalities but several persons were severely injured and were removed to a hospital. The game was stopped for ten minutes as a result of the accident, which created something of a panic.

At three o'clock it was announced that no one was seriously injured after the falling of the center of the north stand.

Among the injured were: Mrs. Frank L. Gilbert, wife of former Attorney General Gilbert; Miss M. Royce of Janesville, a high school teacher; R. A. Roberts, Rube, ankle broken; J. H. Rhoads, Chicago, ankle sprained; Mrs. Thomas, Milwaukee, ankle broken.

One man who refused to give his name was taken to the hospital where it was found by physicians that both legs were broken. Three students are believed to have been injured internally. Scores of persons in the accident were in a semi-dazed condition and seem to be expressing themselves as to whether or not they were hurt.

Three girls, students at the university, were taken to the infirmary, where they are said to be suffering from internal injuries.

The badgers entered the first score in the game this afternoon with field goal. The score stood Wisconsin 3, Minnesota 0, at the end of the first period.

Wisconsin's first score came within six minutes of play. Eber Simpson kicked the goal. During this period the Badgers had the Minnesota team completely bewildered and continued to break up trick play after trick play.

Minnesota Scores.

After two trials, Minnesota pushed the kicking over in the second quarter. Goal was kicked. Scores: Minnesota 7, Wisconsin 3.

Badgers Win Cross Country.

Cardinal cross country runners captured first place in the annual run this afternoon over a five mile course. Although Watson of Minnesota came in first and Mason of Illinois second, Wisconsin representatives won, third, fourth, fifth and seventh and twelfth, this showing giving the Badgers the honors.

Illinois Winning.

Chicago, Nov. 20.—At the end of the first half the score stood Illinois 10, Chicago 0.

Purdue Scores.

Bloomington, Nov. 20.—At the end of the second period the score was: Purdue 14, Indiana 0.

THREE R'S DEBATE AT FULTON NOV. 23

IS A HOMECOMING

George H. Rumrill of This City to Again Appear Before Pupils of Forty Years Ago.

School boys and school girls of forty years ago of the village of Fulton will once again, on Tuesday next, gather in the little hamlet to make merry for the day, and incidentally decide whether or not the teaching methods of the present day schools are or are not better adapted to the needs of young America than those of four decades ago.

The meeting will open at 10:30 o'clock and will be held in the Congregational church, since the school house is regarded as inadequate for the attendance. At noon a big dinner will be served.

Miss White, the teacher at the Fulton school, and her assistants are to defend the affirmative in the debate, and Mr. Rumrill and J. E. Wallen of Fulton are to uphold the negative. The question is: "Resolved, That the methods of teaching in the common schools of today are better adapted to the needs of the pupils than those methods of forty years ago."

Seven Protestant Churches to Arrange for 1916 Sunday School Meet and Religious School.

One of the notable events of the fall in Janesville church circles will be the banquet at the Baptist church Monday evening in which seven of the churches of the city will participate. It is to be in the interest of the Sunday school work of the city, and will take the form of an Echo Banquet, at which the echoes will be furnished by the delegates who attended the annual meeting of the Wisconsin Sunday school convention at Green Bay, Nov. 9-11. The convention was a notable one and those who attended were greatly enthused. Their reports will be interesting and practical.

The preliminary organization for caring for the state Sunday school convention, which will meet in Janesville in 1916, will also be formed. Another matter of great importance to be considered is that of the community training school for religious education. A program will be outlined and committees appointed. It is planned to inaugurate this school immediately after the holidays.

Professor H. C. Buell will act as toastmaster at the banquet, and musical numbers will be furnished by the orchestra of the Baptist Sunday school and a male quartet.

All interested in religious education are invited to be present.

The program arranged is as follows:

Music by the orchestra.

CRIMSON AND BLUE BATTLE FOR HONOR IN HISTORIC GAME

Yale Fighting Spirit and Harvard Machine to Test Strength in Game of Games Today.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 20.—At the end of the second period the score stood 27 to 0 in favor of Harvard. At the end of the first period the score was Harvard, 13; Yale, 0.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 20.—With the banners of crimson and blue flung to the breeze as in the old days when they battled for the championship of the gridiron, the football teams of Harvard and Yale met here this morning in the oldest contest of their respective schedules, a game of games, the Harvard-Yale football game.

There were reasons, however, why Yale had hope of being able to save a most disastrous season from utter ruin by winning or trying with the Cambridge combination in the closing contest of the year. The Eli football material is not without its merits and while it is admitted that the Harvard team is the best in the country, the Harvard contingent, Cornell and the Princeton team, are not invincible. The Harvard team, however, is a team of the future, and the Harvard contingent, Cornell and the Princeton team, are not invincible. The Harvard team, however, is a team of the future, and the Harvard contingent, Cornell and the Princeton team, are not invincible.

Those who know the real meaning of the old Yale fighting spirit, the possibilities of the present squad and the power of the Harvard contingent, are not adverse to wagering reasonable sums on the Blue at the odds Harvard cohorts have been offering. The two universities the question of victory or defeat is not of the utmost importance. The fact that Yale and Harvard were to meet in the greater sports event of the intervarsity year was sufficient reason for their presence in the stadium today.

The 1915 records of the teams; the physical statistics of the squads and the probable line-up of the two eleven follow:

Sept. 26—Harvard, 49; Colby, 6.
Oct. 2—Harvard, 23; Mass. Aggies, 0.
Oct. 9—Harvard, 23; Carlisle, 7.
Oct. 16—Harvard, 0; Virginia, 0.
Oct. 23—Harvard, 0; Cornell, 10.
Oct. 30—Harvard, 15; Penn State, 0.
Nov. 6—Harvard, 10; Princeton, 7.
Nov. 13—Harvard, 16; Princeton, 7.

Sept. 26—Yale, 37; Maine, 0.
Oct. 2—Yale, 0; Virginia, 10.
Oct. 9—Yale, 7; Lehigh, 6.
Oct. 16—Yale, 19; Springfield Y. M. C. S. 0.
Oct. 23—Yale, 7; Washington & Jefferson, 16.
Oct. 30—Yale, 0; Colgate, 15.
Nov. 6—Yale, 6; Brown, 8.
Nov. 13—Yale, 13; Princeton, 7.

The selection of Messrs. L. C. Widger and J. H. Widger to the directorship of the Cincinnati National League club, to the two places vacated by the Fleischmanns, puts a pair of ardent fans and high-class fellows in a position where they can serve the club to good advantage. Both have been following baseball for many years, and will be of great assistance to President Herrmann in the conducting of the club's affairs. It has been denied that there is any chance of the Federal league buying into the Cincinnati club. This story was created by the fact that Herrmann frequently has been in conference with some of the Gilmore club owners, but this was along time ago and never for an object and his own club was not involved any more than any of the others.

BADGERS FIGHT HARD TO BEAT MINNESOTA

Out on Field at Two O'clock to Clash With the Plunging Gophers in Last Game on Camp Randall.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Nov. 20.—The Wisconsin varsity football eleven trotted onto the historic field, Camp Randall, this afternoon at two o'clock, when the plunging Gophers from Minnesota were met. The contest marked the biggest event on the 1915 Badger schedule, and more important, was the last football contest to be played by varsity eleven on the field. The new field will be completed when the 1916 eleven opens its season.

Not content to tie the Gophers, Captain Buck led his crippled heroes against the desperate attack of Williams' heavier team. Buck, who is the western pick for all-American honors, was determined to do his best, as he indicated in a talk before the student body Friday night. Coach Juneau, who was to lead the team, declared that a victory over Minnesota would mean a great come-back for the Badgers, especially under adverse conditions.

The meeting last night was one of the biggest ever held at the gymnasium. Thousands cheered Buck, "Ring" Gardner, the Chicago sport scribe, Bush, a former Badger star, Coach Juneau, and others who spoke. Cheers were given as each player's face was shown on the screen.

The little back had a bad ankle, which has been swelling lately. Eber Simpson played at his place, with Taylor, the new find, working the line. Juneau depends on speed and the selection of plays. Taylor to play an important part in determining a victory.

The complete line-up for the Badgers was as follows: Starvum, lb.; Captain Buck, lb.; Hancock, lb.; Gunderson, c.; George Simpson, re; Eitzler, rt; Meyers, re; Taylor, qb; Eber Simpson, lb; Smith, rb; Kreuz, fb.

Every team that could be found was sold by the athletic council, the number exceeding fifteen thousand, with the gridiron surrounded with a mass of bleachers and temporary stands, in addition to the grand stands. Minnesota bought up a big lot of tickets early in the week.

One hundred and seventeen runners were entered in the western title event staged at Camp Randall before the game commenced. This event attracted the attention of thousands.

Dow Harvey, Wisconsin runner, was entered, and it was expected he would save the day for the Cardinals. The schools entered are: Illinois, Minnesota, Northwestern, Iowa, Iowa State, Chicago, Purdue, Ohio State, Wisconsin and Kansas.

We are likely, in the future, to have less physical training and more physical training," concludes the New York Medical Journal in an editorial on "Present Practices in Physical Training." The writer condemns the athletic coach who trains his pupils to "win at all costs."

BASKETBALL COMES FOR ATTENTION NOW

Rules Passed Will Improve Game by Eliminating Rough Playing.

With the close of the football season, state high schools are turning their attention to basketball. There are seven principal changes in the rules governing the game of basketball this year. They are:

1.—After a dribble, a shot for a goal is allowed.
2.—During a dribble, the ball may be touched simultaneously with both hands. When the ball comes to rest in one hand, the dribble terminates and the ball must be passed to another player or a try made for a goal.
3.—A player is disqualified for holding, blocking, tripping, running into, charging or pushing an opponent.
4.—On all "toss ups," the jumpers must keep one hand behind their backs. Neither may catch the ball until it has been handled by another player.
5.—On a free trial for goal, as soon as the ball hits the basket or backboard, players may enter the free throw lane.
6.—In the foul known as "three men in," a foul is made when a third player comes in bodily contact with an opponent, even though it be accidental.
7.—When the referee has awarded the ball to a player out of bounds, an opponent may not touch it, and so check the play until his teammates have covered their opponents.

PLAN TOURNAMENT IN HAND BALL AT "Y"

Hand Ball Tournament at Y. M. C. A. to Start Next Saturday.—All Members Should Enter.

Plans for a hand ball tournament at the Young Men's Christian Association have been completed and play will begin next Saturday, Nov. 27th.—All the teams desiring to enter are requested to make their entries as soon as possible. The winners of the tournament will be taken on the basis of games won and lost.

The committee in charge of the tournament is composed of Fred Sheldon, William McVicar and Rev. J. C. Hazen.

MORRIS MILLER

Pitcher Jack Henley of the Vernon Coast league club has refused to accept a cut in salary and has gone back to his trade of bricklaying in preference to accepting a $400 a month check next season.

Jake Daubert, National League star who lost out in the race for alderman in Brooklyn at the last election, has doped out why he lost. Jake says it wasn't because of lack of popularity or campaigning. "I was on the wrong ticket," says Jake.

Christy Mathewson, Otis Crandall, Harry Davis and Chief Bender are keeping in condition for the coming baseball season by taking a trap shooting tour. They will exhibit in many of the large cities of the country.

The resignation of Frank Hinkley as Yale's head coach has been clinched by Yale's victory over Princeton, which indicated that methods other than Hinkley's could make a success out of Eli's eleven. Now they're looking for a successor to Hinkley, as Tom Shevlin, who whipped the Yale team into shape, is a business man and can only respond to emergency calls. Johnny Kilpatrick, former Yale end, who has been assistant coach, and Tad Jones, famous Yale quarterback of bygone years, now at Exeter, are prominently mentioned for Hinkley's job.

Eddie Murphy, formerly with the Athletics, but now a valuable member of the Chicago White Sox, tells this one about a rube critic: The Pacific-Hawaiian barnstormers were playing at Madison, S. D., last fall on the day that Grover Cleveland Alexander of the Phillies struck out twenty-one of the American league batters. The teams played at an adjoining town named Forsythe the next day. A fan in Forsythe laughingly showed the players a postcard he had received from a friend in Madison. It read: "Dear Pete, Don't pay money to see those busters play. I seen them pull awful things and make it a farce over here. Why, I even seen one guy named Eddie Murphy try to sacrifice without nobody on the bases."

The present rule in the National league which forces every club to hold its roster to twenty-one men during the regular playing season is to be fought at the coming meeting of the old organization. The principal objectors to this limit are the New York and Boston clubs. McGraw claims that the fact that he could not carry more than twenty-one men caused him to finish last, while Stallings believes that if he had been able to carry a few more players he would have won the pennant.

MILLER'S REGULARS LOSE TO ALL-STAR FIVE

Miller's Regulars were humbled last night when they clashed with the All Stars, and were beaten by 130 pins. Robbins was high man for the evening, with a score of 212 pins. Newman was next with 191 pins. The scores and lineups are as follows:

Miller's Regulars	All Stars
Kueck	183 181
Yeomans	169 127 151
Hammond	123 162 140
Newman	191 181 122

RIVER FALLS TAKES STATE NORMAL FLAG AT WHITEWATER, 7-0

Whitewater Proves Unable to Retain State Title for Third Consecutive Year.

It was a wet day and wet battled wets at Whitewater yesterday for the home normal school was playing River Falls for the Badgerdom football title. Whitewater was not so white after the fray, for her erstwhile spick and span victory sheet was marred by a 7 to 0 defeat. River Falls added to fall before the versatile attack of the two times champs, and aside from the failure to kick the title upstate, to a little hamlet that boasts a normal school more than population, or an eighth wonder of the world. Chances are, however, that the natives are figuring their pigskin chasers as the said mentioned phenomenon today.

It was a tucked away in the northwest corner of Pierce county and about thirty miles by rail from Minneapolis, the home of the Gophers, incidentally it might be stated that Minnesota tactics played the way for victory, although a costly fumble by Whitewater proved the incentive for the crossing of the home boys' goal line.

The game was played on a field that was sloppy and muddy and an exhibition of good football was out of the question. Both coaches admonished their players to go slow but sure and take advantage of the breaks which were bound to come with the soaked and slippery pigskin and drenched clothing. It was evident from the start that the team which was the aggressor when the breaks occurred was to win. Both teams fumbled repeatedly at the start. It was impossible to firmly grasp the ball or to secure a good foothold, although the field was grassy and fast ordinarily. The game was slowed up considerably by the condition of the field, and, outweighed about five pounds to the man, their play was rough sleazebag throughout, even with the gridiron covered with snow.

Captain Schutte of River Falls lost the toss and kicked to Whitewater, opening the struggle. A few short gains by Whitewater and a fumble gave the ball to the northerners. By consistent line plunges and varied shifts they worked their way towards the goal line. Otto Eggebrecht went over right tackle for a six yard gain, eluding touchdown of the game, within the first five minutes of play. "Young Eggs," as he is known, made his points at the extreme end of the line, but the kick-off was caught and later the goal kick were sure, adding the seventh point.

Following the score the game developed fiercely. Whitewater was unable to gain through the River Falls line and resorted to kicking. They seemed able to hold well on the defense, however, but were unable to make first down catches when in possession of the ball.

Whitewater's only chance to score and the only occasion when the River Falls goal was endangered came in the third period. They had the ball just within the ten yard line, but lost all opportunity of tying up the game when another costly fumble occurred with the slippery pigskin.

The northerners punted to safety

JANESVILLE ELEVEN LOSES TO FREEPORT

Local High School Football Team Drops Final Game of Season to Illinois School, 33-0.

In a sea of mud and water the Janesville high school football team went down in another defeat yesterday afternoon, down at Freeport when they played the Freeport high school, losing by a score of 33 to 0. The light Janesville team was unable to get a start in any part of the game on account of the deep mud. The day was anything but ideal for a football game, but nevertheless the local boys fought hard all through the struggle.

When the first half opened Freeport put in their entire second string of players and were only able to score but one touchdown. In the second half they found out that Janesville was a harder team than they expected, so ten fresh men were put in to replace the second string bunch.

Viney, who played in the back field, made many gains for Janesville on end runs, but on line plunges the Bowler City boys were helpless. In the first period both teams punted a great deal, to catch the wind, and the game was a series of punts. The final score at the end of the game was 33-0.

MEMBERS OF FOOTBALL TEAMS TO MADISON.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Edgerton, Nov. 20.—The High School football team departed for Madison yesterday afternoon to be present at the Minnesota game at Madison today. The boys went to this game in a body and their expenses were paid out of their treasury, there being enough money in their treasury to give the boys this treat. They have not been able to arrange a game for Thanksgiving as yet but it is hoped that some arrangements can be made so that there will be a game here on that date.

MADISON COMMERCIAL CLUB FACES A $2,000 DEFICIT

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Nov. 20.—Although it has already expended $30,878 this year, the Madison Board of Commerce today found that it had a deficit of $2,048.19. The statement of expenditures show that the board spent $5,556 for public affairs; $18,036 for business development and $7,086 for organization affairs. The salary expenditures are divided among the three divisions as follows: Public affairs, $2,843.76; business development, $6,547.76 and organization affairs, $8,644.55. The expenditures for the fall festival are shown under business development to have amounted to $2,567.28. The dues from the members of the board amounted to $16,160.

The pioneers of Iowa, the greatest agricultural state in the Union, saw the wisdom of a law modeled after the currency law of the United States which would protect its holders of insurance contracts. This law, almost as old as the company, prescribes that our assets shall consist of first mortgages on farms which at present represent 90 per cent of our assets and are in turn secured by practically four times their value. Municipal bonds loans on policies and our Home Office building comprise the balance of our assets. This law which prescribes the kind of assets the company shall invest in, also demands these assets to be deposited with the state, thus making the state a trustee for the fulfillment of your contract.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

The day we are to celebrate next Thursday is a national holiday which is distinctly American, and the proclamation of the president, and of the governors of the states, reminds us of the significance which attaches to Thanksgiving in this year of our Lord, nineteen hundred and fifteen. Thanksgiving day has always been noted for good cheer. It is the one anniversary of the year when scattered families gathered about the old home table, and enjoyed a reunion stimulated by the best dinner which the old time mother can provide. Unlike Christmas, the day is free from the spirit of giving, with the hope of receiving, as much again. It is the day when the stomach receives special attention; the day when the children of the slums are gathered and fed, and when the tables of the masses are loaded with the bounties of the year.

It is supposed to be the day of universal gratitude, and it approaches the ideal, in this respect. The life is poor in spirit which fails to find some cause for gratitude, on Thanksgiving day.

The blessings of life never stand out quite so prominently as by contrast, and this is just as true of nature as of individuals. There was never a time when the world was so present, when America stood out as the one great nation of the world, free from war and tyranny. The one land of all lands, where the oppressed find freedom.

To be a citizen of this free and peaceful country today, is not only an honor, but a blessing, which should inspire in every heart the most profound gratitude.

This land has long been known as the world's great melting pot. Its races have always swung wide to the oppressed of every land, and for many years they came to us at the rate of a million a year.

These people, coming from every nation on the globe, were subjects of kings and empires. Many of them had been subjected to the most humiliating servitude, and their advent into a land of freedom, where every man is a sovereign, was a great revolution.

The war has drawn an imaginary line between the native born and adopted citizen, but it is only imaginary, and the hyphen, which marks the distinction, has no right to exist. The British, the German, the French, the Irish, and the people of every other land, come to us of their own free will, to better their condition. If their ambition was not fully realized before the war, it ought to be now, for if they were still citizens of the fatherland, they would be a part and parcel of the most cruel war that ever cursed any people.

The adopted citizenship of America, above all others, should devote Thanksgiving day to thanking God for shelter and a home in a land that is free from strife and tyranny.

The kings and rulers of the old world may be great men. They are clothed with authority which brooks no denial. They command and their subjects obey. Under their iron rule human life becomes a by-word, and suffering and sorrow a common inheritance, and all for what, but to gratify the ambition of kings and potentates. The most humble American citizen has occasion to rejoice that he is not subjected to this kind of tyranny, and that his first allegiance is to his God and himself. If at all appreciative the question of loyalty will be easily settled.

It is perhaps just as well that Thanksgiving is not a world's holiday, for the anniversary would seem like a travesty, this year, to the nations crossing the seas, if they have anything for which to be thankful, it is difficult to discover at long range. The history now being written is a history of tragedy, noted for unmarked graves, desolated homes, and an army of maimed and crippled men. An American manufacturer recently received an order for one hundred thousand dollars' worth of artificial limbs. That tells the story of one of the sad aftereffects.

As a nation, our sympathies have been stirred, and we have responded liberally to calls for aid, on the part of these unfortunate people, but we are too far removed from the theatre of action, to appreciate in any degree the horrors of the most brutal war ever waged.

While all Europe is suffering from physical agonies and mental anguish, which no pen can portray, she is also the victim of moral degeneration. The finer sensibilities have been destroyed, and the brute in man so predominates that deeds of brutality command a premium. Inventive genius exhausts energy in developing deadly gases, and other devices of cruelty which would not be tolerated in civilized warfare, while undersea destroyers menace the great waterways.

The Armenian population of Turkey is more than one million strong, has practically been wiped out, within the past year, and not a protest has been offered. The atmosphere of war is a soul destroyer, and the great missionary work of the next half century will be to restore what the world has lost in moral conception.

We have occasion to be thankful, as a nation, at this Thanksgiving time, that the broad ocean separates us from this tainted atmosphere, and that human life in America still represents sacred values.

The nation is composed of units, of which you and I are a part. National gratitude comes to us as a personal obligation, but it should represent more than that because American citizenship today is a choice heritage, crowned with blessings. The causes for individual gratitude are as varied as the circumstances which surround us. The farmer works with nature as a partner, and nature is sometimes erratic. As a result, toil is not always equally rewarded. The hail, the storm and the lightning sometimes destroy the fruits of a season's efforts, and in the ruin the man finds it difficult to be thankful at Thanksgiving time. Death comes into other homes and breaks up the family circle, and the vacant chair is a sad reminder of happier days, yet there is a philosophy to drouth and flood, to death and disease, and the God who created, equipped us for the great emergencies of life, and the star of hope holds us steady through its dire vicissitudes. The year may have been disappointing to some of us; but few conditions are so bad that they might not be worse, so let us gird our loins and go forward. Here is a choice sentiment from the pen of Martha Shepard Lippincott, on "The Brighter Dawning," which is full of encouragement for discouraged people.

Although the world is full of trouble,
 Keep looking for the brighter day;
 When clouds of sorrow will be passing
 And peace and joy will come our way.
 Around the clouds will silver linings
 Be shining so that we can see
 The brighter dawning for the morrow,
 For all mankind, will surely be.

There never in life will be a night-time
 So dark but day will follow soon;
 No winter-time so cold and dreary
 But after while will come sweet June.
 And so in life there is no sorrow
 But what will sometime pass away.
 With some bright dawning there'll be coming
 Around for you, a brighter day.

SNAP SHOTS

We credit the man who wears whiskers with a single to left. He generally has a sufficient sense of the fitness of things to stay off of roller skates.

It costs a circus $500 to show in our town. But it hasn't been so long since the circuses got a good deal of their money in the same way.

After a man is thirty-five or forty he usually scrutinizes every piece of built-in gear for the purpose of locating the hook.

What has become of the old-fashioned woman who said: "His father's overcoat would make him a pair of pants."

Nearly every man has an idea that if he stays away there won't be any party.

A prune is just what it pretends to be, but canned apricots often come upon the table wearing a disguise.

When a man pretends to have had a revelation, that means he is either a faker or a fool.

You, too, probably have noticed that the underwear flapping on the line in the back yards always belongs to the man.

You will die in time, anyway. Don't permit health faddists to beat you out of the fun you might otherwise have.

When a poor man desires to call another man a liar he must do it himself. But a rich man can hire a lawyer to attend to the matter for him.

Suggestion to boys: An orator gets his picture in the papers every four years. That of a good third baseman appears nearly every day.

ROY K. MOULTON

The Day's News.
 The air is full of hubbub and confusion. The senate's filibuster is on.
 They utilize their speaking powers.
 And shoot the bull for hours and hours.
 These senatorial overloads
 Do wrench and tear their vocal chords.
 And time they would assassinate.
 It is their way to save the state.
 From early morn till dewy eve
 They argue or make a bet.
 And then from eve till break of day
 Right merrily they bang away.
 His guns they roar and roar again.
 Sounds like the battle of the Aisne.
 When one, exhausted, quits the race,
 Another there takes his place.
 In this great conversational toot.
 To break the record for long talks
 And mystify the japs and gawks.
 The people do applaud and shout
 And wonder what it's all about.

George Wash.
 Wouldn't George Washington have a slithering old time telling the exact truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth in this day and age? When a letter with an isinglass front came to the house, Martha would say: "What's in that letter, George?" George would reply: "That's a bill from the florist, m' dear," or would he suddenly hear a noise in the cellar and rush down to fix the furnace? It's a question, isn't it?

Of course, you will understand, Martha has not received any flowers from George, and that makes the situation a great deal more difficult than it might be otherwise.

But those were the good old days. The genius who invented the peek-a-bow letter with the firm's name up in the corner had not yet appeared. George couldn't lie to his wife over the phone, for the simple reason that there wasn't any phone. It sounds logical when you think of it.

Uncle Abner Says:
 Any feller that will leave the gold band on his cigar while he smokes, it is the same kind of a feller that will borrow a dress suit and wear it to a funeral.

Nobody knows just how a married couple can get along peacefully as well as do a man and woman who have been married—about two weeks. Rubber cherry for the saloon cocktail was a genius, but he hasn't got a thing on the feller that invented the rubber oyster for the church social. There is hardly a sal that objects to havin' a mustache on her upper lip providin' it's the right feller's mustache.

Genesis.
 Out of the silence, song:
 Out of the bud, a rose,
 Out of the rose, the scent
 The wind blows.

Out of the word, a war:
 Out of the steel, a ship;
 And, so we are told, there comes
 Out of the germ, the grip.

Out of the winter, spring:
 Out of the planet, grass;
 Out of the picture package, seeds;
 Out of the garden, sass.

Out of the bureau, a hat;

Out of the drawer, a braid;
 Out of the closet, a hat;
 Out of the house, a maid.
 Out of the pocket, a bill;
 Out of the bottle, a stew;
 Out of the stew, a still;
 Out of the dark, a zoo.

Money in 't.
 A year ago he walked the streets
 With aimless tread and slow,
 An old bandanna at his neck,
 His face denoting woe.
 His coat and trousers shone with age,
 His hat, once black, was gray,
 And as he shambled here and there,
 The people edged away.

Last night I saw him in his car,
 In perfect evening clothes,
 He wore the smile—the diamonds too.
 The man of millions knows.
 His overcoat was rich in fur,
 A silk hat crowned his brow,
 A friend explained the fellow's change,
 He's teaching dancing now.

To the Cannery With These:
 Is the lady of the house in?
 Who opens?
 What'll you have?
 Who left that door open?
 Are you sure these eggs are fresh?
 Well, what's in it for me?
 Lady, will your dog bite?
 Miss Brown—Clarice—will you be my wife?
 Is my hat on straight?
 Number, please?
 What's the score?
 One or two lumps?
 How do you like my new hat, John?
 Say, Maria, can't you make the baby quit crying midnight?
 What'd she have on, Maria?
 My petticoat ain't showing, is it, ma?
 Haven't got a couple of good aisle seats, have you?
 What time is it, Central?

The Daily Novelette

Pliant Percy.
 —The barber's stories may not always be fit for publication, but they are frequently illustrated with cuts.—Prof. Sump.

"Father," said little Percy Boston-Beenz, "I have been excogitating over your recent remarks to me about my little dog Elektra, and I have come to the conclusion that your parents' advice was as usual given only for my own good. Father, Elektra is a destructive canine, as you concisely said, and I will get rid of her. She erred grievously in masticating the new parlor carpet."

"Percy, you are a salubrious child," said Mr. Boston-Beenz, approvingly. "And to show my appreciation of your filialness I hereby grant you permission to have a party not only on your own birthday on your little sister's natal day as well. 'Thank you, father. I will dispose of the canine this very afternoon,' promised little Percy dutifully, as he removed his spectacles and polished them with the literary page of the Boston Psychologist. And that afternoon he swapped Elektra with Harold Backbay for Harold's two bull dogs.

GIRL DOGGED MAN'S TRAVELS, IS CHARGE

Ada M. Cox.

Ada M. Cox, the Chicago girl who last year secured $17,000 from William Rufus Edwards, wealthy St. Paul lumberman, in a breach of promise suit, is now in pursuit of Lawrence E. Bacon, wealthy Chicagoan, charging that he violated the Mann white slave act with her as the victim. Bacon says she pursued him from town to town, registering at his hotels as Mrs. Lawrence E. Bacon. He says he has tried constantly for three years to get rid of her.

WAR WRITING KEEPS POET KIPLING BUSY

Rudyard Kipling.

Rudyard Kipling, the English poet and author, has directed his entire literary talent to war writing during the past year and a quarter. He has written war stories for the magazines and war articles for the newspapers and other publications. A new book of his, "France at War," has just been published.

Responsibility Surrendered.
 "Your wife is an enthusiastic advocate of woman suffrage." "Yes," replied Mr. Meekton. "And I'm glad of it. She's going to take her turn at letting me ask irrelevant questions, while she tries to explain what's being done in politics."

ENLISTS CHILDREN IN THE NAVY LEAGUE

Mrs. Benjamin Reeves Russell.

Mrs. Benjamin Reeves Russell, wife of Lieut. Col. Russell of the U. S. marine corps, is the organizer of a children's auxiliary to the Navy League of the United States. The purpose of this new organization is to interest the children of America in preparedness for defense and the doctrine of "America First." Mrs. Mary S. Lockwood, also well known as a leader of the D. A. R., is the honorary chairman of the woman's section under whose direction the movement is going forward.

CATARH LEADS TO CONSUMPTION

Catarh is as much a blood disease as scrofula or rheumatism. It may be relieved, but it cannot be removed by simply local treatment. It breaks down the general health, weakens the lung tissues, and leads to consumption.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is so successful in the treatment of catarrh that it is known as the best remedy for this disease. It purifies the blood. Ask your druggist for it.

Rather Hard on Father.

Among the Walwai tribe of the Amazon basin, as among several others, the curious custom of the couvade prevails; that is, when a child is born, the father takes to his hammock and remains there for a month. During this time he refrains from all strong food and the women wait upon him as an invalid. Meantime the mother of the child goes about her work—"Nature Life in the Amazon Wilderness" by Dr. Engel.

BIG TAX REDUCTIONS THROUGHOUT COUNTY

CLERK'S CERTIFICATION SHOWS
DROP OF $47,146 IN STATE
AND COUNTY TOTAL.

NO STATE ROAD LEVY

For First Time in History of State Aid
Highway Law There is No State
Road Tax.

Indications are that the taxes this year will be decidedly lower in practically every assessment district of the county. Certifications of the state and county taxes levied against the various towns, villages and cities have been completed by County Clerk Lee, and are now in the hands of the clerks who will proceed to prepare the tax roll.

According to these certifications the total state and county tax to be collected in Rock county this year is $244,316.05, or $47,146.87 less than the amount of a year ago. It is almost half the exorbitant levy of the year 1914 when the amount reached to $482,320.02, precipitating a storm of protest which resulted ultimately in the overthrow of the McGovern administration.

Reductions have been made in both the state and county appropriations. In fact there is really no state tax except $1,000 which the state must levy under the statutes and of which Rock county's share is but $28. The remainder of the so-called state tax is for school purposes and the state charges back to this county from the various state charitable and penal institutions. For the first time since the state aid highway law has been in operation there is no state levy for highway purposes, and the money which Rock county will receive from the state for road work in 1916, will in reality be "state aid." The county will not have paid in two dollars in tax for one dollar received in return as aid, as has been the case, speaking in general terms, in several instances. This situation, as indicated by county clerk Lee, is due to the economies which have resulted from the businesslike management of the Philipp administration.

But the saving is not entirely due to state economy. The county can boast of a decided reduction in its levy which likewise is the result of careful and economical handling of the public funds. The county board at its last session appropriated $50,000 for general purposes, which is $20,000 less than the amount appropriated a year ago and $40,000 less than for the year 1913. In addition there is the county highway tax and the soldiers' relief fund, which are practically unchanged. As the result of this cut in both the state and county levies, the taxes lower, even in communities like Beloit and Janesville, where the city taxes have been raised slightly. In Beloit, despite the fact that $12,000 were added to the school tax over last year, the tax rate will be lower.

For the first time in the history of Rock county the city of Beloit will pay a larger part of the state and county taxes than the city of Janesville, the levy against Beloit being $43,791 and against Janesville $40,952. The increased valuation of Beloit is responsible for this situation.

PRIMA DONNA IN NEW PARIS MODE

Louise Edvina.

Louise Edvina, the beautiful French-Canadian opera star, arrived in New York a few days ago attired in a fetching costume patterned after the Cossack's uniform. The long three-quarter coat is edged with astrakhan and has deep cuffs and a large collar of the same material. A charming turban of like material gives the wearer a chic air. The belt is a girdle affair, heavily embroidered, and elaborately trimmed with silver.

SIDE LIGHTS on THE CIRCUS BUSINESS

By D. W. WATT

On Wednesday of this week, I took the 11:35 train over the Northwest road for Baraboo, Wis., where I had been invited to be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. Ringling at the opening of their beautiful new theater. On entering the train at Janesville, I was soon greeted by a number of friends, among them Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Ringling and their son, Robert, who make their home at Evanston, Illinois; Mr. T. Ringling and son, Richard, of New York City, and many other prominent circus people, who for many years have been with the Ringling and the Barnum shows. Theatrical men, scenic painters, canvas makers and many prominent citizens from Chicago and other towns, all of whom were bound for Baraboo to do honor to a man who had the courage to build in that city the finest, if not the finest, playhouse in America, Mr. A. Ringling.

At Madison, many prominent people joined the party, among whom were the son-in-law and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Ringling and by the time the train reached Baraboo, it was crowded like an excursion train bound for the big Ringling circus. On our arrival in Baraboo, Henry Ringling was there with a big touring car to meet his brother, Charles, and family, and the crowd soon left the depot in different directions, everybody in a hurry, and seeming to know just where they wanted to go.

Many of the old employees visited the winter quarters, and others the homes of old friends. As soon as I had brushed off a little of the dust of my journey, I went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Ringling. As it was information that I was looking after, I made up my mind there was only one place to go, and that was to headquarters, where a big touring car was at the palatial home, which is only a short distance around the corner from the theater.

A massive home with its many entrances it was difficult for me, as they would say with the circus, "to pick out the main entrance," but I finally pushed the button and a male servant appeared at the door, and told me that I had come to the right place, and that I did not care to break that, but I was an old friend of Mr. Ringling and was there only to make an informal call.

He ushered me into a large room which Mr. Ringling has used much of the time through his sickness, as kind of a business office, and I found him busy dictating letters and letters to his secretary, and I was soon seated in a big easy leather chair, and Al said to his secretary, "Young man, there will be nothing more doing for a while, for I have many questions to ask Mr. Watt, and we will make a visit here while you run up town and attend to some other business."

Soon told Mr. Ringling the business part of my visit was to find out just much of the particulars as possible about the beautiful new playhouse and how he came to build so fine and beautiful a theater in a city the size of Baraboo.

The ground on which the theatre is built and which has been owned by Mr. Ringling for some time is eighty-eight feet frontage on the corner, almost opposite the old city hall, and court house, and 132 feet deep, but after Mr. Ringling had his plans for the building all completed, and just the size that he wanted it, he found that he was short four feet of ground in the rear of the building, which he would have to have in order to get just the size auditorium and stage that he had figured on. This land fortunately belonged to a city, and he was not long in getting a deed of the extra four feet. In a few days the work was commenced, which was early in the spring.

It was about four o'clock in the afternoon on Wednesday, when everything was completed and put in shape, ready to be occupied in the evening. The building is as near fireproof as it is possible to build one, the entire front being of two shades of granite and white marble, and the entire building re-enforced steel and cement. There are two lobbies at the main entrance of the theatre, a beautiful marble trimmed office being in the first lobby and at the second entrance there are six swinging doors and on entering the second lobby, there is a beautiful fountain, and opposite to it on the right was what they called an Italian rest bench. From this you enter the main floor which contains 844 seats, raised from the stage so that every seat gives as good a view of the stage as does the front row. There are sixteen boxes, which contain six seats each.

Beautiful dark red velvet carpets cover the cement floor and inside, as they also do down the main aisle.

The curtains and draperies in the boxes are in keeping with the carpets and of the same color. The huge marble columns on the inside with their brass trimming, presented a most beautiful sight. As the tickets were all sold in advance, the lights were kept well turned down until the entire audience was seated, and it was almost time for the curtain to go up, when the entire lighting plant in a second was turned on, and the cheers that went up from the people at their first sight at the new playhouse was deafening and lasted for some minutes.

In the private boxes were many prominent people from different parts of the state, Gov. Philipp and a party of friends being in one box; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ringling and family in another, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ringling and friends, and Al Ringling and his wife with some friends in another. As a large party of the audience came in full dress, it was certainly a wonderful sight to behold.

After Mr. Ringling had given me as many particulars as possible about the building, I asked him what I should say about the cost, or the approximate cost of the entire investment, and he simply smiled and shook his head and said:

"Nothing doing. 'What Dave,' said he, 'has never entered into the game. My object from start to finish was to give the people as fine a playhouse as the size of it as there was anywhere, and the architects and finishers and many theatrical men have said that I have accomplished my undertaking. And if so, then I am satisfied, for I have had much pleasure in all the years that I have been in the business, and although at times it seemed hard, it was a pleasure for me to make the money, and I have done something with a part of it that will bring pleasure to my friends and neighbors. I have accomplished something."

And if the warm welcome that Al Ringling and his estimable wife, who received in their private box at the close of the show goes for anything, their friends are legion.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry North and family occupied the box next to Mr. and Mrs. A. Ringling. Mrs. North is the only sister of the Ringling brothers.

Sosman & Landis company of Chicago did the scenic painting in the theatre; Gustave Brand of New York and Chicago were the decorators; The Ornamental Plaster & Carving Company did the plaster work; the Wiley Brothers of Chicago, the general contractors; Charles Kleckner, of Baraboo, the general painting; Mandel Bros. of Chicago furnished the draperies, carpets and seat coverings; Victor S. Pearlman Company installed the lighting fixtures of which there are 2,500.

The stage is 33 1/2 x 60 feet wide, and 46 feet high; and the beautiful marquetry aving reaches out to the edge of the side walls, and is all made of glass and underneath is a mass of electric lights.

A massive fire curtain of asbestos, which is 24x40 feet and weighs 750 pounds, serves as a protection between the stage and the main floor.

An organ, which cost $5,000, was furnished by a local music house of Baraboo, and is said to be one of the finest of its kind in the country. The dressing rooms, of which there are many, are furnished with the latest of everything; in fact, nothing has been overlooked to make it the most complete theater of its size in all its appointments, that there is in the country.

The ushers were all in uniform, and all seemed to work as though they had been at it for years.

Long before the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. A. Ringling, their box was simply a bower of roses and beautiful flowers of all descriptions, among which was a piece over four feet high, given them by the Commercial Club of Baraboo.

And after the fall of the curtain on the first act, Governor Philipp was called upon for a speech, in which he said in part that he was there with other friends and neighbors to do honor to a man who had honored Baraboo and its people for so many years. He paid the Ringling brothers a glowing tribute for the way in which they had always conducted their business, and said without any question, they had done more to build up the models of the circus people than any who had ever been in the business. He congratulated the people of Baraboo and the surrounding country on their being so fortunate as to have a man in their community who had built such a beautiful playhouse, where they could go for years to come, and always be proud to point it out to their friends as the theatre beautiful, which will always be known as the Al Ringling Theatre.

And as for myself with the many old friends surrounding me, I almost fancied that I backed up thirty years or more and was again the business, for I thought that I could smell the sawdust and the menagerie, but the dream pipe soon went out, and I had to bid my old friend adieu, and take the train back home. But Wednesday, November 17th, put another bright day in my life, all through the kindness of an old friend, whom I made in the circus business more than thirty years ago—Al Ringling.

MUSICAL COMEDY RATTLING GOOD

"Lady Luxury," Which Appeared at Myers Theatre Last Evening Amusing, Pretty to Look at and Done by Clever People.

Startling mechanical effects were conspicuously absent from the musical comedy, "Lady Luxury," which appeared at Myers Theatre last night. The producer instead chose to put his money into salaries for competent performers with the result that he compered several grand opera voices and the services of a cast that was far superior to the average musical comedy cast.

The plot is woven about a little miss who has been brought up in the old-fashioned way by a severe old uncle, who becomes an heiress on her 21st birthday. When she learns of the money she immediately plans to make up for lost time and tastes several samples of the forbidden fruit, but the musical comedy hero is there on time and forestalls any bad effects, and everything works out to a happy ending.

Florence Webber is a very gracious little prima donna, who uses her good dramatic soprano voice with telling style. Singing honors, however, belong to Forrest Huff and Arthur Albro, both of whom are gifted with beautiful tenor voices that have been long trained. Huff is a delightful comedian as well, and Albro's smooth acting is no doubt testimony to his experiences on the Italian stage. Of different types, the singing of both men was worth going far to hear.

Fritz Von Busling has both charm and vivacity in addition to a most pleasant mezzo-soprano voice. Joseph W. Herbert earns double credit for being a highly successful comedian, while Sam J. Burton does excellent work in a character part. Eddie Morris sings well and dances beautifully. Gypsy Dale is a charming little ingenue.

There is a chorus composed of good looking people with real musical ability and pleasing deportment, and it is perfectly easy to believe that Lucille is responsible for the very beautiful costuming worn.

The musical score is pleasing. Some of the numbers notably, "Dancing With the Girl from Home," "Written in the Book of Destiny," "Dream on My Princess," "Pick a Pickinny," and the Russian Dance Song, are very charming and original.

They sell everything—the Gazette Want Ads.

Imported Birds.
The number of birds imported into the United States annually amounts to about 600,000, and as many as 17,000 have become dwellers in America, within one day. The half million feathered strangers represent 1,500 different species, but the greater number of the importations are of canaries, parrots and game birds.

A good time to sell your old stove, and the want ads will sell it for you.

AT THE APOLLO.

Blanche Sweet in a Dual Role. Are you two distinct persons? Is there lurking somewhere in your being another personality entirely different from the one you now live? Scientists say there is and at times it tries to appear on the surface, but the stronger will power of your present personality drives it into seclusion, that inside your mind two personalities are continually fighting to gain the upper hand. What would happen to you if the submerged personality should assert itself.

See what happened to the winsome, sweet Dorothy, when the cruel, malicious Becky asserted herself in "The Case of Becky," the Lasky-Belasco drama, which will be the attraction at the Apollo on Tuesday, with the beautiful and clever actress Blanche Sweet as Dorothy-Becky.

Never before has this wonderful Lasky star been seen in a characterization of this kind. The clever transformation of face, manner and action as she changes from Dorothy to Becky show a new side to this versatile young artist that eclipse anything she has done before.

When the leading artistic theatrical producer of the world, David Belasco, presented "The Case of Becky" on speaking stage in New York, it caused a sensation. The idea of a feminine "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" was a novel one and the tremendous battle between two personalities of the same person, resulting in the killing of the weaker, was something so unusual that the play was the talk of the entire country.

The Lasky company has given the play a most lavish production and in the cast supporting Miss Sweet are Carlyle Blackwell, Theodore Roberts, James Neill and other members of the all-star organization.

That there is nothing saving of unscientific in the production of "The Case of Becky," the Lasky Feature Play company before the photoplay was finished at the studios at Hollywood, Cal., called into consultation leading psychiatrists and specialists of Los Angeles, who passed upon the verity and truthfulness of the scenes portrayed. David Belasco did the same thing when the dramatic version was made here for presentation at the Belasco theatre, New York, two years ago.

AT THE APOLLO.

Charlotte Walker in "Out of Darkness."

The gripping drama, "Out of Darkness," with the distinguished actress, Charlotte Walker, in the starring role, will be the attraction at the Apollo on Monday under the direction of the Jesse L. Lasky company. Miss Walker will be remembered by photodramatic patrons here for her splendid performance of the woman of the slums in "Kindling."

In "Out of Darkness" Charlotte Walker is seen as a wealthy society girl interested in pleasure to pay any attention to the conditions of thousands of struggling workers who make her millions for her. How widely sailing her sloop she is run down and injured by a steamer, loses her identity and goes to work in her own cannery where she rescues the manager from the burning office, and but a few of the thrilling incidents in this stirring photoplay.

Miss Walker is supported by a cast of unusual merit, among the principal players being Thomas Meighan, Marcery Daw, Tom Forman, Lucian Liciedahl, H. B. Carpenter and other members of the Lasky all-star stock company.

AT THE APOLLO.

Cyril Maude in "Peer Gynt." Cyril Maude, the celebrated English star of "Grumpy," will be presented in Orlin Morosco's elaborate photodramatization of Henrik Ibsen's "Peer Gynt" at the Apollo theatre on Wednesday.

Famous as a master of make-up, an interesting specimen of his powers is presented not only in his own remarkable succession of makeups but also in the makeup he personally applied in little Mary Ruby's portrayal of Ingrid when she has reached old age. Always cast in ingenue character in which she has gained a wide reputation, Miss Ruby has never had to essay any such role as that or a toothless old grandma. Cyril Maude, generously appreciating the high of the younger player, came to her rescue and with "liner" and grease paint reproduced that graphic picture of decrepitude upon her face which is such an artistic feature and the closing episode of "Peer Gynt." When in the course of the celebrated story "Peer Gynt," himself a broken old man, returns to the friends of his wasted youth in Gudbrandsdalen, he presents a more pathetic proof of the toll the fast moving years have taken than old Ingrid. When one sees the poor old woman with gnarled hands, squinting eyes and sunken cheeks crouching tottering over her crooked stick it is almost unbelievable that she is impersonated by a mere slip of a girl in her early twenties. Few stars might be added, would act as generously as did Cyril Maude.

AT THE MAJESTIC.

Viola Allen Tells of Work in Photoplay.

Viola Allen, the famous stage star, who recently finished her first photoplay, "The White Sister," Essany's latest, is thoroughly enamored with motion picture work. "I never had such an enjoyable experience in my life," she declared. "It was a complete revelation to me. I never had been a motion picture enthusiast before and had no idea what an art this line of work had become. I am entirely converted to photoplays and I think I shall be what you call a 'lad' for the rest of my life."

The work itself was a delight. I enjoyed every bit of it from the beginning of the first reel until we put on the finishing touches. The care and the detail to make a production like "The White Sister" was utterly beyond my comprehension until I saw it actually worked out before my eyes.

"Few people, even those interested in photoplays, I imagine, can conceive of the really artistic work done. I discovered that there was as much art in working before the camera as on the stage. In fact, in some ways it is harder to pose before the camera than it is to convey your ideas before the footlights. On the stage you have your voice to aid you, but in the silent drama you must convey all your ideas by expression alone, which is no easy matter, as I discovered."

"I was both astonished and delighted with the finished production of 'The White Sister,' when I saw it. The picture was complete in every detail and carried out the story perfectly. I think that the family of F. Marion Crawford, the author, will be as delighted with it as I was. It was largely because of their wish that I appear in the picture that I consented to engage in the work and I was especially anxious that they should like the photoplay."

"I am thoroughly satisfied that the picture will be an immense popular success. Its artistic value, not speaking of my own work, is wonderful. I am certainly well pleased that I undertook this, for me, a new line of endeavor."

"The White Sister" will be seen at the Majestic, beginning next Tuesday, at 2:30, 4, 7:30 and 9 daily.

AT THE MAJESTIC.

Variety of Curlos Appear in Film.

Jean Cossar, Essany actor, brought to the studio his private collection of Italian military trophies to be used in the scenes of the Lieut. Severi's den in "The White Sister." These trophies represent a ten-year accumulation from curio shops throughout the country. The film showing these is coming here, with Viola Allen in the leading role, on an extended run at the Majestic, beginning next Tuesday.

AT THE PRINCESS.

King Baggott On Sunday. King Baggott will be seen at the Princess Saturday afternoon and evening in a Universal feature, "The Reward." It promises a very good picture and in addition others will be shown.

The new screen makes a big difference in the pictures. It being possible to make out every detail from any part of the house. The Princess has been extended and many new seats added, so that it will not be necessary this winter to make so many people wait on the outside.

PRINCESS INITIATES NEW SCREEN CURTAIN

Piquant Little Ella Hall Stars in Stirring Photoplay.

Ella Hall, as delightful and refreshing as ever, appeared in the title role of a play after her own heart last evening at the newly remodeled Princess. "Jewell," taken from a book of that name, was enriched with many pretty scenes and resulting in an effect that the book could not attempt to produce upon you. The quaint little story the play unfolded in the untiresome five reels of film, held the audience in a trance of emotional delight. Miss Hall in her favorite role of a little girl, showed how a true loving nature toward all mankind, good or bad alike, can change the world of hate and jealousy into one of love, and resulting make home life truly a blessing to any one.

The manager of the Princess is to be congratulated upon the installment of the new silver screen, which brings out the pictures in a very clear, untiresome way and does away with that common dread of sore eyes. No matter in what angle you view the pictures, from the very front seat to one at the extreme side, the characters do not seem at any time disfigured or out of proportion. The good or bad alike, can change the world of hate and jealousy into one of love, and resulting make home life truly a blessing to any one.

SLAMS SUCTION PUMP METHOD IN CHURCHES

Noted Protestant Officer Scores Present System of Raising Funds for Church Work.

Chicago, Nov. 20.—The "suction pump" method of raising money for church purposes is wrong, according to a statement made by William A. Van Bokkelen, treasurer of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of California, and published here today by the "Veteran Preacher," a Methodist Episcopal journal. It was announced that the statement was made by Mr. Van Bokkelen as representing the views of William Ford Nichols, D. D., Episcopal bishop of California. It follows in part:

"It is a fundamental principle of human nature that no employee can render good efficient service and the most effective service of which he is capable, whose mind is distracted from his work by the thought of how he shall make ends meet on the salary he receives. As he advances in age he approaches the dead line, of what is to become of him and those dependent on him when compelled to relinquish even his meager compensation.

"Of men, profession or occupation is this truer other than that of the clergyman, yet is none of which more is expected. Young men full of religious enthusiasm, feeling themselves called of God, enter the ministry. In the vigor of youth they are ready to deny themselves all the creature comforts of life which are open to them in other walks of life, only to find that the world is ready to let them in on their own terms. The world in many lines of work is recognizing the necessity of making provision for the care of its superannuated employees as a right, not as a grudging charity, and the Church at last is awakening to the same fact and is providing an old age pension positive and automatic; not an uncertain charity dependent on annual appeals.

"The suction pump method of raising money for church purposes by special appeals is totally wrong. The people should be taught their duty as stewards. Appeals are good in their way, in arousing men to their duty, but they are deficient, first in stripping the individual man with a sense of his responsibility for the use of that God had given him, and second in giving into his consciousness and conscience the feeling that his responsibility must be squared with God rather than with any appeal or apportionment; in other words, that the personal religion needs some systematic plan for giving more than any church or beneficial cause needs money.

"True giving is not by goad but by God. The church should enter upon the propaganda to impress upon the conscience of every man and woman that it is his and her duty to contribute to the church, and that the church should determine what portion it is his or her duty to set aside for the relief of others and the services of God; then as an occasion requires to freely give with judgment, not as a necessity but as a pleasure for a duty performed.

"Let the church assume the duty of impressing on its people this duty of stewardship, and instead of appeals for special purposes, a mere statement will open up the coffers, and the people will respond with joy that an occasion has been offered."

The diamond, being the most precious and beautiful of gems, has innumerable legends connected with it, but it has always been considered the safest of talismans. Because it signifies purity, innocence and joy, and is supposed to maintain peace, it has come to be the engagement symbol.

THE GAZETTE'S MOTORIST PROBLEM DEPARTMENT

(Published Saturdays.)

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—Are the rear wheels of an auto set parallel to each other and at 60 degrees with the axle shaft? If not, please explain how they are aligned, also explain "toe in" as applied to the front wheels.

The rear wheels on some cars are given wheels on the ground, and the distance between the wheels is less than it is at the top. This is supposed to induce the car to steer itself. This construction is more noticeable on the chain-driven cars, where the flexibility of the chain permits the usual construction in shaft-driven cars to align the wheels parallel and at right angles to the axle. The term "toe in" as applied to the front wheels means that the front of the wheels is closer together than the rear as measured from the hub center on a line parallel to the ground.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—Will you kindly explain what is meant by back-firing?

Back-firing usually implies that ignition takes place in the cylinder before the piston reaches the dead center of the compression stroke, thereby causing the flame to travel back into the intake manifold. This is usually caused by the operator's holding the throttle open too long, or by the carburetor being too rich.

The term "back firing" is also applied to an explosion occurring in the cylinder during the intake stroke. This would ignite the gas in the intake manifold and mixing chamber of carburetor. Should gasoline be near the carburetor it may cause a serious explosion.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—My engine runs on all four cylinders regularly, but does not seem to have much power as it had. Will you please let me know some of the things that might cause such a condition?

The most common cause is poor compression in the cylinder. If the carburetor is adjusted to give either too rich or too lean a mixture, the engine will not run properly. Should the bearings of an engine result, due to the friction of the piston, it will also do when the clutch slips and does not transmit to the rear wheels the full engine power. Brakes rods sometimes get out of adjustment, causing the brake bands to rub on the drums of the wheels, even when the brake is not applied.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—I have a motor question to ask for publication. I am running a 1914 Buick. I have just had it overhauled and cleaned, and since then it beats very badly. I can only drive a mile or two before the water boils. The mechanic who did the work claims that it is due to the parts being tight. And then shortly thereafter the car overheats. I am in trouble before having the car overhauled. I want to take a long trip with it in this condition.

Can you suggest what might be the cause of the trouble and is it advisable for me to start on a long trip with it?

Either the valves are timed late or the magneto is timed late. More than likely you are running too rich a mixture, which causes the overheating. Would suggest checking up both the valve timing and the magneto timing. If these are set right, you should have no trouble with overheating.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—Will you kindly enlighten me as regards the four cycles of a motor? What is the meaning of same? Hoping you will explain the above and thanking you in advance.

The so-called "four cycles" of a motor are the suction stroke, the firing stroke, the compression stroke, the firing stroke, and exhaust stroke.

The suction or down stroke of the piston takes in the charge of gas, the compression or upstroke of the piston compresses the charge, then the spark is introduced. After this the power stroke takes place. After this the exhaust or up stroke of the piston forces the cylinder of the products of combustion and then repeats.

While the term "cycles" means a complete revolution of the crankshaft, in its application to the gasoline engine each stroke of the piston has become familiarly known as a cycle; hence the four-cycle type engine, meaning four operations in the delivery of one power impulse.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—What is the cause of knocking in the engine when driving up grade or high gear or when car is suddenly speeded up? It runs good on level ground after gaining speed, but when it is speeded up it produces a back kick which is liable to dislocate the shoulder or otherwise injure the arm.

The term "back firing" is also applied to an explosion occurring in the cylinder during the intake stroke. This would ignite the gas in the intake manifold and mixing chamber of carburetor. Should gasoline be near the carburetor it may cause a serious explosion.

There are several causes: (a) Carbonized cylinder; (b) spark too far advanced; (c) gas knock due to wrong mixture. If

HELPFUL HINTS.

There is a right way and a wrong way to start a car. In the first place, the chain should be installed with the hooks on the outside and away from the tire. If this is not done the hook will chafe the casing. In the second place the chain should not be hooked up too tightly. If they are all hooked up too tight, the car will not run around the tire and cause more uniform wear. When this is done the tread is less apt to be loosened.

In order to prevent the silencing of lamp reflectors from tarnishing when not in use, it is a good idea to give the reflector a light coating of alcohol in which a little kerosene has been dissolved. This will form an excellent protection, and is easily washed off with warm water.

Oftentimes trouble is experienced on road with broken universal joint pins on propeller shaft. Where there is no grease in the joint, a temporary repair can be made by using a piece of wire or a heavy bolt wedged in the yokes of joint, to pass the power to rear axle.

If a motor persists in missing when going up a hill, it may be due to the carburetor being too rich, or the magneto being too late. The magneto is being too late, if the motor misses when there is a light load on board it may possibly be obtained by closing the spark gap slightly.

A disagreeable body squeak may often be traced to the suspension point of a fender. If the fastening bolts are not tight, the fender will chafe and squeak. All the small fastening bolts should be kept fastened at all times.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—Will you kindly enlighten me as regards the cylinders are carbonized preignition occurs, producing the same effect as a much advanced spark. If the spark is too far advanced the explosive force of the gas acts on the piston before it reaches the center. The fly wheel momentum is not sufficient to continue the stroke, but without loss of power, pre-ignited charge is manifested by the knock.

This knock is peculiar to some motors. If just the right mixture is not obtained a knock will manifest itself when motor is accelerated or forced to pull. It is often necessary to change the spark in order to eliminate a knock of this kind.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—The other day I was obliged to put my car in a garage en route over night. I have instructions to have the car washed, as there was considerable rain. When I put the car up at night the motor was running freely, but when I went down to get the car the next morning I could not get the motor started. After a while I managed to start, but ran irregularly for a long time. Then all of a sudden, the trouble disappeared. I am anxious to know if this could be the case.

This trouble very often happens when the car is washed by hand. The water is shot at the side of the engine is usually sloped, and sometimes the washer will let the water flow itself through the points when going around the car with the hose. A small amount of water in the motor will cause some circuit and give considerable trouble. As soon as the motor dries out, however, the trouble disappears. This trouble usually happens after a motor has been run for a long time and the short circuit disappears.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—I have a 1909 touring car. When running in high speed the engine seems to go too fast, according to the speed of the car. I have put new leather on the valves, but this has no effect. Any information will be appreciated.

C. M. The new leather installed is not being carefully fitted. It should be faced off on a lathe to remove all spots in order to insure a good contact surface. A new leather usually requires several applications of castor oil or neatfoot oil in order to get it into a pliable condition. It may be possible that the clutch spring is weak and needs adjusting or possibly replacing.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—I have a car with a carburetor. When the motor of my car is not running gasoline drips from the carburetor. Can you suggest a way to overcome this waste?

S. G. The float in the carburetor may be adjusted too high, causing the valve to seat or the float valve may not be seating properly, and it would be best to replace the old valve with a new one. However, the valve may be reset by tapping lightly, making sure to centre the valve pin at the time.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—I have a car and when I throttle down the motor for two or three minutes and then the throttle is closed, the motor seems to choke, and sometimes will stop altogether. Could you tell me the trouble?

Your trouble is in the carburetor. Would suggest you try a new auxiliary air valve spring and note if same work freely and properly.

Question—Please recommend to me a good book for an amateur fruit grower, something that will be useful to anyone raising fruit in the garden for home consumption.

Answer—An inexpensive paper covered book which the writer has found practical is "Amateur Fruit Growing" by Sam B. Green, professor of horticulture in the University of Minnesota.

This will be found more practical in this region than books written for localities more distant.

The fruits recommended by Mr. Green are those that have stood the test.

The amateur should also have at hand our own state bulletins.

In addition to these helps if the inquirer will join the State Horticultural society he will receive a helpful little paper once a month called Wisconsin Horticulture, which will give information with reference to the growing of flowers as well as fruit.

The fee for joining is 50 cents, but entitles one not only to the paper but to the annual report, which contains much valuable information on fruit growing and kindred subjects.

The subscription price of the paper is 25 cents if one does not want to join the society.

Question—Should I have the dirt on the dahlias tubers when I store them in the cellar?

Answer—Authorities seem to differ as to this point, from which it may be inferred that either way will do, if other conditions are favorable.

Wisconsin Horticulture says: "Do not shake any more dirt from the clumps of dahlias than is necessary in removing them from the ground."

The writer has kept the tubers covered fully with the dirt which adheres. The main thing is to keep them cool and dry so they will not get moist and start to grow. If dirt is left on it should be thoroughly dried out before putting away for the winter.

There is a possibility of the roots becoming too dry and the dirt on the roots reduces the danger in this respect. A place that is adapted to the keeping of Irish potatoes is all right for dahlias as far as temperature is concerned. If one has a large quantity to store it might be well to put them on racks or in slat boxes, but for those who have only a few market baskets or burlap sacks will do for keeping them.

Question—When should hyacinths which are intended for winter blooming indoors be brought up from the cellar?

Answer—This depends on when they were put into the cellar. They should be left long enough to get good roots, usually from four to six weeks. After that they may be brought up at any time and if one wishes a succession of bloom, one may bring them to the light a few at a time.

Question—Shall I plow my garden this fall or wait until next spring?

Answer—If you can plow your garden this fall do so by all means, that is, unless it freezes so that it is impossible to plow. It is well to plow late in the fall, but if left too late the frost is likely to interfere with the plowing. It should not be harrowed but left rough so that the frost may puncture the soil and pulverize it.

The Washington Agricultural college of the state of Washington has been doing investigating along the line of spring plowing. As a result the report is made that "fall plowed land contained on an average seven times the quantity of available soil nitrites than was contained in spring plowed land or ground unplowed in either fall or spring. If this is true fall plowing certainly pays."

There are circumstances, however, where the plowing does not improve the texture of the land. If the soil is level and not well drained and the soil is clay, fall plowing does not leave it in good condition. Another advantage of fall plowing is the destruction of cut worms and other pests that spend the winter in the ground, the plowing, if done late enough, leaving them exposed to killing.

But before the garden is plowed it should be well manured. Twenty-five loads to the acre is none too much. Rich soil gives larger and better vegetables than poor soil, and it gives them earlier for the season. It gives them earlier for the season, and it gives them earlier for the season. It gives them earlier for the season, and it gives them earlier for the season.

An Experiment in Feeding Hogs.

The department of animal husbandry of the Iowa experiment station has for the past few years been working on a new system of swine feeding. It is called the "free choice" system and is as the name implies a system by which the hog selects its own food according to its own tastes instead of having balanced rations dealt out to it at the order of the master, who it is to be presumed spent a great deal of time and used up a large quantity of gray matter trying to balance a ration for his majesty, the hog.

This system proceeds on the supposition that each pig is a law unto himself and if provided with suitable food, convenient of access, it will select what it needs so wisely that it will excel in weight and weight is what one's after, when one is working with pigs.

A bulletin will soon be issued setting forth the facts of the experiment which will be watched with interest by the breeders of the state. It gives an interesting discussion of the subject under the title, Free Choice System of Swine Feeding.

Bloat in Cows.

The same Breeder's Gazette gives the result of a recent experience with bloat in a cow. The cow had been wintered in a stall when she was discovered to be bloating. She was next taken out and turned into a field. The gas began to come in three or four minutes and in half an hour the bloat was gone.

ARMY WOULD MAKE A DAY'S KILLING DECLARES MAXIM

Hudson Maxim, inventor of War Implements, Gives Address on Preparedness at Kansas City.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 20.—Hudson Maxim, inventor of many implements of war, addressing the Kansas City Commercial Club at its annual dinner here tonight, said that the only way America could be saved from war would be to have a navy big and powerful enough to stand successfully against any other navy in the world. "The army big enough to save the country from the horrors of defeat and humiliation, even should our navy be destroyed."

"Our little, poorly equipped army would not be able to offer resistance enough to make a ripple in the line of the enemy's advance," Mr. Maxim said. "Our army would make just about one good day's killing."

"Suppose the enemy should land at Boston or New York or any of our ports between. Nothing under heaven we could do would prevent the invaders from capturing the entire country between the Alleghenies and the southern two weeks. Mr. Maxim's suppositional invasion was by a first-class European power at the conclusion of the present conflict."

"Any one of the great warring nations, it is true," he said, "would have available several million war-trained veterans for a trial at arms with us, and should that foreign nation be either England or Germany, it would have a navy far superior to our own, and consequently could not be opposed by our Navy. Hence that nation would be able to land upon our shores its legions of trained fighters, and with all the paraphernalia and machinery of war as fast as they could be brought over seas."

A quarter of a million men, Mr. Maxim said, could be landed within a month and reinforcements of that number brought in within thirty days thereafter, if needed. After they had captured that area, the inventor continued, for America, "there would be but one way out."

"We should have to ransom ourselves with gold and the enemy would throw his sword into the scales as did Brennus to make good weight. Our shores would take possession of our homes and of our women, for to every household would be detailed a certain number of officers or privates, to be fed and entertained. You would no

No Holes—No Screws—Lenses Always Tight.

Reduces Breakage

Neatest in Appearance

"EVER-LOCT" Mountings mean ever tight Lenses—the result is greatest satisfaction to the user.

No Holes—No Screws—Lenses Always Tight.

With the "EVER-LOCT" Mounting you will never be troubled with loose, wobbly glasses. There can be no chipping of the lenses because there are no holes or screws.

The "EVER-LOCT" Mounting holds the lenses by metal tongues which grip like a vise.

This Mounting reduces breakage to a minimum because it does away with either holes or screws through the lenses. It holds the lenses positively tight and tight to stay, hence with the "EVER-LOCT" Mounting your glasses will always remain in the same position as originally adjusted for you.

The old hole and screw method has never been satisfactory. The "EVER-LOCT" system ensures you an Eye Glass or Spectacle Mounting that will lend beauty to the face and forever end all of the annoyances incident to other types of mounting.

The "EVER-LOCT"

Has been perfected in every detail and is the latest—the best in glasses.

TURKEY DAY EDICT OF GOV. PHILIPP

ELLIS B. USHER MAKES FAVORABLE COMMENT ON THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

NO ROOM TO CRITICISE

Omission of Word God Referred to U. S. Constitution Where Creator's Name is Also Missing.

(By Ellis B. Usher.)

Milwaukee, Nov. 20.—The governor of Wisconsin has issued a proclamation upon the excellence, both in matter and spirit, of his Thanksgiving proclamation. Historically, he speaks with accuracy in referring to this as the day of our American holidays. It is the national and annual observance paid to the 110 souls who came in 1620 in the little ship Mayflower. Half their number perished within the first year, and but twenty of the men left descendants, yet so deep an impression did they make upon the future that their day of thanksgiving and prayer, set apart to celebrate their first harvest in 1621, has been perpetuated to our day and its one hundred millions of people, their successors. The influence emanating from Plymouth has been vital. Thanksgiving day, and the history that inspired its general observance are among the most generous of American impulses. The pilgrims were not Puritans. They were broader in both faith and experience than the Puritans. They were not driven from England by persecution, they had lived long in Holland. They knew a larger world and were more tolerant than their Puritan neighbors. There is a chief reason why the day of thanksgiving is still celebrated. But no man needs belittle the Puritans. That they were in advance of their time and more liberal than their kindred who drove them out, and that the people of the Europe of that day, needs only a knowledge of contemporary history to discover.

It is a good thing to study the meaning of our day of national observance, and the injunction to do so would lie with especial force upon those who are free men in spirit and in truth, and know the reason why, not in matter on which the Atlantic they may have been torn.

Gov. Philipp has done well to give to this day its proper emphasis and acknowledgment. The spirit of his proclamation is the spirit of American freedom.

Those who criticize the governor's omission of the word God, may be referred to another historic proclamation, that of the governor of the United States. George Washington presided over the convention that framed the Constitution.

In accord with the spirit above referred to, the real American may give thanks next Thursday, and it will be well if he can do so without mental evasion or any suggestion of that stern old New England conscience that is his inheritance. However, he may ignore this inheritance. It will never ignore him, and he will be a rare man if he does not acknowledge it. He could not easily accommodate himself to the plan of the dorky minister of whom Booker Washington once told in an address in this city. That minister, as Thanksgiving approached, prayed that the Lord would send him a turkey, but the turkey was missing each morning. Finally there were only two days left before the day.

"Lord God please send this turkey, sure, tomorrow morning," prayed the old minister. But though he opened the door in faith, next morning the turkey was still not there. That night he prayed: "Lord God, please send this turkey to a turkey." The next morning he had one.

He had combined faith and works. The question of an American merchant fleet has been referred to in the last two of these letters. I have not really dug into the subjects, but one thing seems clear, namely, there are many conflicting statements and opinions on the subject. Whereas one set of people seem to make a great outcry that the LaPorte steamer's law has driven our vessels from the Pacific, and another says that all bosh, there seems to be still another that is going right along sailing wood and doing little talking. Everybody who knows anything at all knows that lake vessels are doing all that their capacity permits and at high prices. We know, too, in a general way that 100 or 170 vessels have recently hoisted the American flag, and that notwithstanding the Kiowa, the Pacific Mail and the Dollar Line, most of our ship yards are busier than they have been in a generation. Fifty-eight cargo steamers are now sold to be building. Only the other day J. C. Thorne, president of the Pocahontas Navigation Co., and of the Pocahontas Consolidated Coaleries Co., told the Small Ship Journal that two vessels recently launched and one to be launched in December, are the beginning of a new coal fleet of cargo steamers. Each vessel is of 3450 gross tons. This fleet will take coal to foreign countries, a new American trade. He also called attention to a fact not generally known, I think, that this country already stands second to Great Britain in merchant marine, with 4,400 vessels, aggregating 3,700,000 tons, as against 11,353 vessels with 21,274,000 tons for Great Britain.

Over a quarter of our tonnage is on the Great Lakes, and a large proportion of the remainder is engaged in coastwise trade, but out fleet is growing fast. The fifty-eight steamers now building, according to this authority, will add 100,000 tons to our fleet and it looks as if private capital was getting ready to scrub along without the brace of a government owned merchant marine. Anyhow some of the conflicting stories we hear must be pretty bald buncombe.

Schools and Politics.
In an address before the Alumnae of Milwaukee Downer College, last Wednesday, Miss Wooley, president of Mount Holyoke college, referred to the conditions in Massachusetts that have involved the public schools in politics. "Don't let your public schools become political machines," was her warning. In her state the controversy, real and imaginary, is with the Catholic church. Personally, I don't care at the domination of the Catholic in our public schools, anymore than I do at any other church's domination. The men who left the world God out of this constitution of the United States did so because they wanted to separate church and state, not in their own minds, but for the good of the country and of all its inhabitants. Such men as Roger Sherman of Connecticut and Daniel Carroll of Maryland, one a leading representative of the Protestantism, the other an equally prominent representative of the Catholics of America, worked hand in hand in that convention, and history gives to these two the chief credit for this achievement for freedom and tolerance. When the University of Wisconsin appears in politics or the Normal schools, or the public schools, no matter what the pretext, they are inviting politics, and inviting in politics, to enter all of these institutions. Freedom for all men can mean only one thing, freedom for each individual man, no matter what his race or faith. The presence of politics in our public schools, high or low, is an assurance of the ultimate debasement of all, and of one of the gravest and most menacing attacks possible upon free institutions.

Checkbook Race.
The holidays are approaching, the saddest of the year. It is the regularly recurring season for "beating up the bushes" for the churches, for charity, for clubs, for taxes, and incidentally for the tailor, the coal merchant and the family "Yuletide." I say "Yuletide" advisedly because it suggests the tide that flows to your furnace, or your bank account, if you have one, not "onto" your Saturday night's pay envelope. It is the season to enjoy being a millionaire of infinite spread. The very time to be "one of the side rich" and not one of the grubbing slaves of daily necessity. Think how joyful it would be to take your checkbook on your limitless bank account and go to the city and see the augustity of the men's missionary movement, stay there long enough to draw your check and hear the missionaries draw their check a few minutes, then grab your trinity checkbook and draw your check, that is, building a grand new building, draw another check, and then on to the Y. M. C. A., which is seldom in a mood to turn away a check. You can let it up until midnight, and then some, and this happy, righteous rich man may be sure that other opportunities for doing good will come in the morning mail, and by the time the check is cashed, charges in charity are no exception to the universal need of money. Even the poor and struggling man need not languish for opportunities to do good. He can let it up until ten hours, at least, at his desk, or hushing among his customers for the food that means just existence to his family, he settles down after dinner to a check. You can let it up until, with a long sigh of relief, reaches for the penny sheet he grabbed as he took a street car. But he has hoped in vain. His nickel telephone rings and a check from a distant city is sent. He smiles sweetly that the president of the church Christmas fund reminds him that there's a musicale on at the church parlors. He rouses himself to duty and by the end of the week he has been thus awakened and cuffed up like a ventriloquist's mannikin at least six times, with "You like to help a good cause don't you, Billy?" and "You knows he must say 'Yes'—awfully."

These are strenuous times. Every "good cause" has a tom tom accompaniment. Like war, "It's hell" for the man whose time and purse must stand the strain.

Sportsmen Sparks.
It looks as if the long threatened upheaval over the absurd amateur rules now prevalent in college circles will occur during the present college year. Yale disqualifies three star athletes for a technical violation of a rule. Williams severs athletics relations with Trinity because Trinity, of the later school's football team was a professional baseball player. New York University follows Williams example and Columbia refuses to play Williams if Trinity employs Brinkley in the annual Wesleyan-Union game. In the West, Minnesota loses Solon, as she lost Capron some years back and immediately goes berserk, challenging the eligibility of any player anywhere she thinks it will make trouble.

All the student bodies of the western conference are disgusted with the present rules. The Eastern college bodies as a whole are opposed to them. It will not take such encouragement to start the flame of revolt which will eventually burn up the last vestige of the antiquated system under which colleges have been working.

The new eligibility rules, vaguely whispered about, give promise of real sensible action.

Mr. W. J. Fitzgerald, assistant of General Agent Pheasant, whose immediate charge is the local business of the Erie Railroad Lake Line, tells me that the boats will run up to November 30th, and while they are going and coming with full cargoes, every precaution is being taken to keep off a blockade of freight at the last minute. "He is anxious," he says, "to get the 'Lake and rail' customers should realize the pressure of lake tonnage this season and get on the schedule before the distance has been dropped. Business holds up in all departments and the optimists seem to have the floor at present."

The Pushman paintings that have been on exhibition at the Milwaukee art society's galleries have proved the sensation of the year. Three of them will be kept here by local collectors, and another may be presented to the Art Society. The artist will take his Milwaukee exhibition as a result of his first exhibition in this country.

Mr. Patrick Cudaby, who has just retired from business and turned the management of his son, signified his new life by a splendid endowment of $100,000 for charity and a $25,000 gift outright for similar purposes. The Milwaukee Foundation, established last spring, of which the Wisconsin Trust Company is the custodian, is the recipient of Mr. Cudaby's generous and permanent contribution to charitable uses.

Temperance Talks

BEER DRINKING AND ITS EFFECT UPON HUMAN PROGENY.

Statement of Colonel L. Mervin Maus, of the U. S. Army Medical Corps. (Article submitted by the Temperance League.)

"Many who denounce ardent spirits, consider beer a wholesome and sustaining food. Beer drinkers are especially liable to fatty and enlarged heart, diseases of the liver and kidneys complicated with dropsy, arteriosclerosis, gout and rheumatism."

"The mortality on brewers between the ages of 50 and 60 is about three times as great as that of individuals who follow the ordinary occupations of life. In fact the mortality of liquor dealers, and brewers, and distillers, is greater than that of any other occupation. Doctors Bauer and Bollinger of Munich report that the beer drinkers' heart in that city causes one death to every sixteen from other diseases. There is a marked contrast in the general appearance and physical condition of the beer drinker at 40 or 50 years of age and the abstainer at the same period of life and almost invariably in favor of the latter."

"As a result of the continued use of beer post-mortems disclose a dilated stomach, fatty heart, diseased arteries, liver, kidneys, a yellow adipose deposit under the skin, and general injury to the tissues throughout the system. Graphically speaking, the constitution of the chronic beer drinker is 'shot' to pieces at 40 or 50 years of age, and his system may be aptly compared to the condition of a wooden structure in the Philippines, which has been honey-combed by the white ants."

"In Germany, Austria and Scandinavia, to determine the effects of alcohol in moderate quantities on the mind, body and heredity. Beer was used in many of these experiments. Voit and Schaeffer found that alcohol neither increases brain energy nor muscular power. Kurz and Krastinoff have shown that less than three ounces of alcohol (2 liters of beer) daily for twelve days lessened working capacity from 25 to 40 per cent. Furer tells us that the moderate use of alcohol affects memory and ability to add figures."

"Exner has proven that it decreases the rapidity of receiving and sending telegraphic messages. Bager has shown that children who drink one or two glasses of beer daily stand lower in their classes than abstinent children. The effect of alcohol on the human progeny has been one of the most prominent subjects of German and Austrian scientists during recent years, the majority of whom have advocated its abandonment, not only on account of its effects on the individual but on his progeny."

"In his address before the Thirtieth International Congress Against Alcoholism at the Hague in 1911, Dr. Wasson of Vienna states that Dr. Roese has statistics to show that 67 per cent of the sons of brewery workmen were unfit for military service. Assuming that the same percentage of the daughters was likewise defective, we have good authority for believing that 67 per cent of the children of brewery workmen of Vienna was mentally or physically defective on account of beer drinking parentage."

"The German Ministry of Education recently approved the following notice which has been distributed by certain departments of the Board of Health: 'Give your children not a drop of beer! Not a drop of brandy! And then in detail outlines the effects of the use of beer on parents and child. Professor Hahnel says that 300 of very 1,000 babes are born dead among the Bavarians, the greatest beer-drinkers in the world, and that $9,000 of them die annually in the first year of life."

"But why submit further evidence on the subject, for has not the German Emperor advised his people, and especially his children, to abstain from beer? Emperor William, in my opinion, is the greatest and wisest ruler that ever occupied the German throne, and certainly has had every opportunity to study the degrading influences of Germany's national beverage."

"What?" he shrieked, "what? You damned Johnny! You tenderfoot! I'll—!" And he lunged forward. A smooth, black muzzle came forth and pushed its brazen menace into his face.

"I'll shoot the first man that attempts to pass me," said Sandry hoarsely.

Raving and cursing, he backed away. More than one of the fourteen begged to be allowed to pass, and one of the lumberjacks from Sacramento muttered deliriously of calling his bluff. But the awful moments dragged by and Sandry stood at the entrance. The flames passed all measurement of light and heat. He lost sight of the figures at his feet. He felt himself going out in the darkness.

"Siletz," he muttered, "little Siletz—!" When he came to himself again, men were crawling across him. He could breathe better and the light had lessened. He sat up, wincing at the moving of his scorched skin over the muscles underneath, crawled out with the rest and one by one they rose to their feet. The great timber of the East Belt farther down stood serried and green. The effort had not been in vain. The holocaust was checked, the Belt was safe.

Back toward the north stretched a forest of tall, black spikes, picked out here and there by heavy spots of fire where fallen logs, dry and pitch-laden, burned steadily. The green canopy was gone, every vine and bit of brush, every sapling and fern. Only a thin edge still crackled and snapped with streamers of flame along the trench.

"Mr. Sandry," said Harris, the sawyer, "if you're an Easterner I hope to God the bread fills up the country!" He extended a hand which Sandry grasped.

"An' me," said Murphy, his grimy features distorted in an expression of mingled gratitude and contrition. "I take it all back—every damn word I ever said against you, an' it's a long list."

"Forget it," said Sandry. He was no longer Johnny Eastern. He had won his right to live and fight among them. "Is it over, Collins?" he asked, steadying his voice.

"Over? Look yonder. Feel th' wind. It's changin' again. Th' fire's back-crawled toward the Siletz basin three miles, I'll bet, while we've been savin' this end. We've only begun to fight."

CHAPTER XXVII.

The Shot in the Hills.

At camp they met a party, headed by the foreman, just starting out in search of them. Their absence had been discovered only when Dally, coming in from the north, where his work had been laid out, had asked for Sandry.

At sight of him the three women standing together at the foot-log gave evidence, each in her way, of those emotions which the suspicion of his fate had stirred.

On Ma's face was an unbounded pride that he had come through, a man of parts, abundantly able to care for himself among a harder crew. On Miss Ordway's there lay a vast relief, while Siletz played with the collar of her blue shirt with trembling fingers and moistened her dry lips.

Sandry turned and looked up at the darkened east with a profound joy. He swept his eyes north to where the red heaven flared and staggered to his office.

"Three hours, ma," he croaked in a voice of warning, "only three hours' sleep for all of us. If you give us longer I'll never forgive you."

It was true, as Collins said, that they had only begun to fight.

Through the hours, days, nights that followed the saving of the East Belt they took no note of time. Up along the blackened, devastated valley the soldiers moved their camp. Ma Dally shut the cook-shack and suborned a wagon to haul her big range up and deposit it alongside the camp stores of Company H, where she dispensed coffee to her men and all others with impartial zeal. Miss Ordway, her skirts tucked up from the contamination of the burned earth which rose in hot, black puffs at every moving foot, was compelled to help if she would hold that espionage over Siletz from which she hoped to realize her ambition. A bitter hatred sharpened her blue eyes upon the girl, and she ached to seize her and tear out of her blouse that packet of proofs. She was angered at herself that all her cleverness had failed to recover them before this.

So the hours passed with smoke and heat and a sun like a copper shield. Men came and went in relays, sleeping upon the ground for short shifts, rigidly apportioned and observed. The flood of flame, runner after an ardent wind, had piled its forces in leaping billows among the northern hills. It seemed a thing of irresistible might, but the toll-men hung to its flank with a dogged persistence, emboldened and encouraged by the success on the east ridge.

Sandry, limping painfully, and haggard as a ghost, stuck with the vanguard despite Ma's commands and Dally's warnings. At each fresh sight of his face the girl Siletz was wrung with anguish. It seemed as if he could bear no more and yet the spirit in him drove him on.

Once she ventured a timid protest. "What is the timber worth if you die?" she asked plaintively, and Sandry, still somewhat of a boy, parried the yearning question.

"Who would care?" he laughed wryly, "would you, Little Squaw?" The girl did not answer, but as she turned away the ready mist sprang to her eyes and he reached a contrite hand to her shoulder.

"Forgive me! I know you would!" It seemed to Siletz as the horror swept north and the men were lost for hours in the dim fastnesses, that something was about to happen.

She felt a presence of disaster which Coosnah shared, and they two stood apart for long spaces of time, silent, listening, the muscles of each drawn taut. From time to time the great mongrel would squat upon his haunches, lift his heavy muzzle toward the dun-smoke heavens and bay with a long-drawn, silver note that was the very acme of melancholy.

And then came a dawn when no one came in for breakfast, when the sun, coming over the ridge to the east, was not visible. Only a pale light turned the heavy canopy to shadowed pearl. The three women waited in that silence which ever attends the waiters for men who face danger. They were used to the silence, for there was no accord between them. Ma Dally had long ago shut this "bird o' th' earth" out of her good heart and Siletz hated her with the fury of the woman whose mate is threatened.

At last a solitary Indian came down the valley, running, his mouth full of excitement and dolorous prediction. The whole of the Siletz would go. It was the wrath of the Great Spirit turned loose upon a wicked world. It was the judgment. There was nothing like it. He fell into jargon and reverted to the ancient gods, and Siletz checked him sternly.

"What do you mean, Quanna?" she said, "have you forgotten the Preacher and the Bible? There is only one God and he holds us in the hollow of his hand. It is not the destruction of the world. It will stop. What more has happened, and where is Sandry of the camp?"

Everything had happened. The whole country was afire. Not only a ridge or two; a valley in between, as it had been here, a day, two days back, but ridge after ridge, valley after valley—the world, the earth, the heavens. Sandry was somewhere up behind the Hog Back.

For a moment the girl looked out across the slough, lying like a dirty ribbon between its gray and wilted banks. Then she turned troubled eyes to the general.

"Mother," she said, "I know it now. There's danger to Sandry, and I'm going."

"Child, you're wrong this time. Sandry's a man. Well as you know th' hills I can't let you go. I forbid it."

They faced each other a moment while Siletz tossed back her braids and tightened her belt.

"I'm going," she said quietly. Ma Dally, who had raised her, said no more; but as she turned to the stove aimlessly—as was her wont in every time of trial, there was a deeper line about her tremulous old mouth.

Swift as the wind the girl ran down the valley toward the deserted camp. Miss Ordway watched her and against her will, drawn by some subtle excitement, some urging power, she, too, gathered her skirts and began to run across the puffing ashes. At the lean to she came upon the other just leading out Black Bolt, a shining beauty, eager for the turf.

"I'm going too," panted Poppy, reaching for a bridle that hung behind the bay.

Siletz had always ridden bareback, but now, why she did not know, she took down Sandry's saddle and slung it on Black Bolt. Poppy followed her movements, and by the time Siletz had put foot in stirrup and swung up, she had caught up her wide skirt and mounted. Siletz stared around at her and her eyes were beginning to sparkle in a face pale with rage.

Without a word they galloped up across the lonesome valley and took to what had once been a trail in the nodding ferns. Now it was but a slight depression running amid the blackened trunks, the endless heaps of ashes. Poppy Ordway followed Siletz, on a chance, a dare, a more hazard. She did not know the danger, the menace of the hills.

She was saying to herself after her enticing habit of self-communion: "I'll have my precious packet soon. I know I shall. The gods are with me. I feel it."

Once Siletz turned upon her. "Go back!" she cried fiercely, "something is about to happen."

"You're right," said Poppy, and for once the hardness of her nature showed like a rock under waves in eyes and voice and manner, "and I'll be in at the happening."

They spoke no more. Siletz checked Black Bolt in another mile, rose in her stirrups and looked over the appalling spectacle before them. Over and beyond lay the tumbled hills, thick with heavy timber, that ran into the Siletz basin. Somewhere in their fastnesses reared the mighty spine of the Hog Back with its secret trail. And somewhere up behind the Hog Back was Sandry. Calm as she was by nature, Siletz shuddered as she looked upon the world of flame and smoke. To Poppy Ordway, ignorant of its meaning and its might, it was a splendid spectacle.

Siletz plunged down the ridge on the other side and the woman followed. The shadows of the smoke-filled valley grew into an uncanny twilight. The fine, light ashes made slippery going and more than once Black Bolt slipped, to catch his footing, catlike. They rode ahead and entered the fire belt itself. The dusk grew denser. The heat lay like a tangible blanket in the hollows and dips. Siletz urged Black Bolt. Something was calling out of the gray dimness—chilling her heart, hurrying her progress.

She had ridden for a time in deep thought when a scream from the woman behind drew her up with a start. She turned just in time to see the big bay fall and go tumbling down the mountain. With his first lurch he had flung his rider out of the saddle and into a pile of ashes. It was true to her nature that the girl, dismounting, ran, not to the woman but down the slope after the horse. She found him prone and groaning in a little trench, his right foreleg doubled back, the white bone piercing the earth.

Poppy Ordway peered fearfully down, her trembling hands gathering her dust-covered skirts.

"Come here!" Siletz cried, commanding; "come here!"

It was the same voice, whimpering with primitive rage, that had compelled that craven "Sandry" from Poppy Ordway's lips that night at the pump, and as the woman had obeyed then, so she obeyed now.

Siletz rose, reaching in the blouse of her shirt and brought out a gun.

Poppy Ordway shrank back, white as chalk.

"What do you mean?" she cried shrilly, "what are you going to do?" Horror widened her blue eyes grotesquely.

life," said Siletz solemnly. "But I've got to kill him. And you stand by to watch—it's your work."

There was a sharp report that did not echo in the fire-deadened hills, and the good horse closed his eyes in sudden peace. Siletz turned away to where Black Bolt looked on with wonder. Coosnah crouching beside him. In a swift revulsion she flung the weapon far down the mountain.

She started to mount without a glance at the woman when the other spoke.

"What am I to do?"

"Do? I don't care what you do. Go home. And I hope you never reach there!"

"My God!" cried Poppy Ordway. "don't leave me like this! And look! Look there!"

All along the valley by which they had come a long, swift drift of smoke was rolling, sent out like a current from some newly fired cross-canyon. Its low-lying pall formed a bewildering mystery to anyone save a native of the hills. A woman on foot would never reach camp through its blinding darkness.

Long Siletz sat turned in her saddle and looked at it. Then a thought of Sandry and his standards pierced the emotions that dominated her. There was but one thing to do.

"Come up," she said at last, "I'll have to take you."

"When We Tell Others of the Value of Father John's Medicine As a Tonic and Body Builder and for Colds."

The Sisters of St. Mary, of Masson, Que., Canada, in a recent letter, say: "We will willingly point you to make use of our testimonial in favor of Father John's Medicine. We consider that by doing so we are rendering a great service to humanity at large, but especially to people of limited means, who are desirous of having a quick, sure and comparative inexpensive restorer of health. They have all this in Father John's Medicine. For several years and with best results we have been using your medicine in our community. We have already recommended it to several young ladies, teachers who say that from the very first bottle they used they have felt its beneficial effects, and as soon as they begin to feel tired, they are as fresh and energetic as before. If you have any difficulty in securing Father John's Medicine from your druggist, write to Father John's Medicine, Lowell, Mass., enclosing $1.00 for a large bottle, by express, prepaid."

at the irksome toll of the class room, a bottle of Father John's Medicine gives them new vigor. In case of severe colds we find Father John's Medicine is a safe and prompt remedy. Hoping that these few details of our own experience in the use of the medicine may be useful to you, we remain, Yours very respectfully, (Signed) Sisters of St. Mary." Because it contains no alcohol or dangerous drugs Father John's Medicine is a safe medicine for children as well as older people. It is a doctor's prescription, more than fifty years in use. HERE'S PROOF

A Janesville Citizen Tells of His Experience.

You have a right to doubt statements of people living far away but can you doubt Janesville endorsement?

Read it: C. W. Allen, retired farmer, 107 E. Milwaukee St., Janesville, says: "I suffered from rheumatic pains in my back when I bent over and my muscles and joints were twisted out of shape. My feet were swollen and the flesh under my eyes was all puffed up. I couldn't sleep well, my kidneys acted too freely and the secretions were scanty. The passages were accompanied by a burning pain. I had to be careful of my kidneys. A doctor told me I would be dead in three months. Then I got Doan's Kidney Pills from the People's Drug Co. and they permanently cured me. I am hale and hearty even if I am over-seventy-seven years old." Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Allen had. Dinner Stories

From an English recruiting center comes this story:

An Irish recruit was being drilled in the mysteries of fencing with the bayonet.

"Now," cried the instructor, after carefully explaining various lunges, "what would you do if your opponent feinted?"

"Begorra, sir," said the Irishman, with a wink, "I'd jest prod him wid the point of my bayonet to see if he was shammin'."

Molly and Minnie were two little girls who had been very carefully brought up. Particularly had they learned that they must never tell a lie—not even a "white" lie—nor deceive anyone.

One day these girls met a large cow in a field they were crossing. They were much frightened and stopped, not knowing what to do.

Then said Minnie: "I know, Molly! Let's go right on and pretend we're not afraid of it."

But Molly's conscience was wide awake. "Wouldn't that be deceiving the cow?" she objected.

STORY OF INTEREST TO FARMER YOUTHS

Weekly Installments of "Joe, the Book Farmer," Will Appear in Gazette.

The opening chapters of "Joe, the Book Farmer," by Garrard Harris, were published in the Gazette of Friday. Installments of this story will appear weekly, on Friday, until finished, and promises to be a series of unusual interest to the farmer boys of the county. Boys who are taking the agricultural course in the high school, or boys in the rural schools who are learning some elementary agricultural facts, will find the serial a delightful reading. But not only the farmer boys but city youths as well, will find the tale a thrilling one which will make good Friday night reading.

By Paul Holmes.

CHAPTER V.
For the few moments following Kit's startling announcement as to the identity of the animal found in the trap, there was silence between the two boys. Ned stared at the story as well as though he could hardly believe his eyes. Kit, with a far away look on his face, stroked the fur. The finding of this fox meant much to him. His trained eye could easily tell that the pelt would be an exceptionally fine one. Its sale would bring him not less than three thousand dollars, he felt certain. What couldn't he do with this amount of money? Why, it was more than he had been able to save in the three preceding years. His college course, which before had seemed rather vague and shadowy, was now reaching before him, plain and bright.

It was Ned who broke the silence. "I thought such things as silver foxes were confined to fairy tales, as a general thing," he murmured.

"So they are," was Kit's reply. "At least they are about the scarcest thing in the fox line that there is. They are seldom seen as far south as this, although they tell that old Pierre Levent caught one about twenty years ago."

"Which all goes to show that we are traveling under a lucky star," Ned rejoined. "How in the deuce do you suppose the trapper thieves overlooked this trap?"

"How do I know? They might have thought that my line didn't extend this far, or when they made the rounds the fox hadn't been caught yet. It's a sure thing that if they had known that an animal of this kind was in this trap, they wouldn't have gone by it so fast. But," he added seriously, "we've got to take to town this and the Levent's in the boot, just as fast as we can toddle. With a bunch of trapper thieves and holdup men around, this vicinity is no place for anything valuable."

"I agree with you there," said Ned. "The sooner we get the skin in a safe place, the better for us. But it seems rather queer to me that we should be in their absence, well, they took his breath away. This new evidence of the work of the thieves was overpowering."

Ned turned to his companion with a blank face. "What can we do?" he asked.

"Go into the cabin and skin the silver fox, and stretch it on a drying board," was Kit's answer. "And then start for town. It's a we can do." The boys had had eyes in the back of their heads, they would have seen a figure start up from a nearby bush at the mention of the words, silver fox. The man stood for a moment looking quizzically at them. Then he smiled malevolently. "Might as well let 'em get it skinned first," he said, under his breath.

As if to substantiate his words, there came a barely perceptible noise from the window. Both turned to see a bearded face disappearing from view. "Don't let on you saw anything," said Kit, in a tense whisper.

CHAPTER VI.
Kit's Sacrifice.

When the face at the window, which both realized was that of the intruder, disappeared, the boys were not only surrounded the cabin, but had the knowledge of the silver fox. Kit mapped out the evening program thus. At about eight o'clock, when the sun had long since set, and the moon not yet put in an appearance, they would extinguish all lights, as if to go to bed. Then they would creep outside and reach the trap to get to cover. If they reached the trap safely, they would follow the river and fairly fly along it until they came to Keewano. Kit decided that Ned should carry the fox skin in his side of his coat, while he carried the skin of a common red fox in his hand. If they were captured, he thought, they might mistake the red fox skin for that of the silver fox, and allow Ned to escape to a place of safety with the precious pelt.

During the long wait until the time for the sally should come, the boys crouched against the walls of the cabin, their eyes fixed on the windows, for fear they might make a target for one of the enemies' rifles. But nothing happened. In fact the trapper thieves gave no further evidence that they were within a hundred miles of the place. After waiting there in the darkness for what might have been an eternity, Kit finally announced that it was time to start.

"This is hardly sport," said Ned, as they went cautiously to the door. Kit looked in wonder at his companion. Then he saw that his friend did not apprehend the peril of the situation. Why, the boy was actually enjoying it.

"We will have to crawl through the broken panel in the door," Kit murmured, shortly. "They would hear us if we opened the door."

At first glance one would say that it was an impossibility for two large boys to get through so small an opening. But Kit threw himself on the floor, and in a moment had wormed his way to the outside.

"Now pass me the red fox skin," he whispered. Silently Ned passed the skin through the opening. Then with the silver fox tucked safely in a side pocket of his coat, he followed.

"Now crawl slowly and don't crunch the snow, to the fir tree there," Kit ordered.

It was nearly fifteen minutes before the fir tree was reached, but as far as they knew no one had observed their movements. Now from here we can make the edge of the line of trees," said Kit. "After that we'll run to the river."

Half the distance was covered, when Ned's snowshoes caught on a branch. A sharp crack resulted, and instantly the boys flattened themselves to the snow. For five minutes they never moved. Then they decided that no one had heard the noise, and proceeded. They were relieved greatly when the shadows of the forest closed upon them.

"Now run," cried Kit. "And run they did. They made the banks of the river in an incredibly short time. "We're safe now, aren't we?" asked Ned.

"We're not safe until we are in the trading post at Keewano," was Kit's answer. "But the worst is past." He had hardly uttered the words when the sound of guns being discharged came to them. They could hear many feet crunching the snow from the direction of the cabin. "They're gone!" shouted someone, in a deep, guttural voice. "Quick! To the river!" And the boys recognized the voice of last night's robber.

"We've got to run for it, now," cried Kit. The boys wasted no time, but in a moment they were going along over the ice as fast as they could. Behind them came the cringing of underbrush, and the muttered exclamations of their pursuers. Kit could see from the first that it was useless to try to keep ahead of the men during all the long way to Keewano. If they escaped with their fox, they would have to trust to something besides their feet.

"Do you see that clump of brush ahead at the turn of the river?" he shouted to Ned.

"When we come to it, you drop down and lie still. I will run ahead and they will go right by you, thinking that you are still with me," Ned wouldn't desert you that way," cried Ned.

"When they get by," Kit went on, not heeding, "get up and take to the woods. They won't find you tonight, but early in the morning lie for Keewano with the fox."

"I'll be all right. Never mind what happens to me. You'll do that?" "It's the only thing to do. Quick, now, here we are." The next moment, Ned found himself crouched behind the clump of brush, Kit was flying along, and then he disappeared behind the bend.

In tense silence, Ned waited. The trapper thieves were close behind, now. Would they see him? (To be continued one week from today.)

CHANCE FOR FARMER TO BUILD BUSINESS IN PARCEL POST USE

Farm-to-Table Feature of System Will Find Market for Products in Larger Cities.

Uncle Sam, for many years a messenger boy and for the past two years a bundle boy, no proposes to launch himself in new fields of endeavor and serve his patrons by carrying articles of foodstuffs for Mr. Con Sumner, of Mr. Pro Ducer. Aside from the errand boy proposition Sam's guarantee that Mr. Con Sumner's table will now be able to serve the products right from the farm daily and at prices readily absorbing the H. C. of L. Mr. Pro Ducer is going to list his name with the postmaster at Chicago and have the advertised day have home cured hams, bacon, smoked and fresh cuts, poultry, eggs, butter, cheese, nuts, maple syrup, honey, jellies, preserves, fruits, vegetables and other farm products at reasonable prices.

The idea is the new Farm-to-Table feature of the parcel post. Opportunity is now offered all farmers and other producers to engage in the mail order business by disposing of their products through the medium of the parcel post. Never before has a greater opportunity been offered to producers to build up a profitable business. The postoffice department agrees to advertise one's business name and the products he has for sale, without cost. Experiments conducted so far indicate that the Farm-to-Table plan is a comparative success and is capable of being developed to much larger proportions. Thousands of consumers in Chicago are now receiving weekly shipments of farm products. Many more are willing to cooperate. Farmers can avail themselves of this opportunity of securing customers for their surplus products. If you have farm products to ship by parcel post to city consumers, or if your name already appears on the produce list and you desire to list new products, then notify Postmaster J. J. Cunningham, giving the kind of products, the quantity you have for sale each week and its price.

The Next Mistress of the WHITE HOUSE

Mrs. Norman Galt, the President's Fiancee, Cynosure of All Eyes—A Woman of Rare Personal Charm, Intellect and Local and Business Ability—Family Old Virginia One.

Copyright, 1915, by International Syndicate.

WHO and WHAT and WHERE is Mrs. Edith Bolling Galt, of Washington, D. C., fiancée of the President of the United States and "first lady of the land-elect"? asks practically every woman—and not a few men—in the land during these strenuous engagement days when the eyes of the entire nation threaten to be permanently riveted from an effort to focus them simultaneously on the Executive Mansion and the comfortable looking residence where the prospective bride makes her home.

"Is she pretty? Is she young? How did the President meet her? Does she care for society? And what will she do with her jewelry business?" are among the countless queries about the coming marriage of the two whose daily doing almost take precedence in the papers over the European war.

A Practical Woman.
To answer them systematically, then, Mrs. Galt is the widow of Norman Galt, who belonged to a very substantial Washington family whose jewelry shop has stood throughout the country for all that was reliable in silver and gold and precious stones.

That she is a splendid business woman was evidenced when, at the death of her husband about eight years ago she proceeded to assume virtual management of "Galt's" and to carry it on most successfully. Although employing a manager, Mrs. Galt, until the great calamity of publicity was turned upon her every move—gave personal attention to the books of the firm, going downtown every workday morning in her now famous little electric for that purpose.

Her house on Twentieth street is a four-story, bay window type with nothing in its exterior except a graceful climbing vine, to distinguish it from several others in the block—that is, until her engagement to the President was announced. Nowadays it is most generally distinguished during the afternoon and evening calling hours and the tea hours and dinner hours and morning driving hours by the presence of White House motor cars, and at all hours by a fringe of ever varying curious humanity, which "watches and waits" in perfect accord with the Chief Executive's own policy and speculates and wonders and is sometimes rewarded by a vision of Mrs. Galt in one of her numerous perfect symphonies of gray, or black, or mauve, as she descends the steps, gallantly aided by the President.

Did Her Own Marketing.
The very early curbstone crowd obtained—until the past week—a much more democratic view of her as she came out unattended, entered her electric and started off for Centre Market to buy the table supplies. For Mrs. Galt had lived so long the simple, unostentatious, unfashionable life of a brainy woman of affluence (all accounts agree that her fortune is about $300,000) who chose her friends because they were agreeable rather than for political, financial or social reasons, such as accrete a number of hostesses in Washington, that she has found it difficult to accustom herself to changed conditions.

Formerly if she cared especially for from queen to scullery maid who does not have such preferences she could just wear it all she wanted but now, when each costume in which she appears is telegraphed in every direction to the land's end and it becomes necessary to give more thought to intellect would otherwise think worth while.

The very early curbstone crowd obtained—until the past week—a much more democratic view of her as she came out unattended, entered her electric and started off for Centre Market to buy the table supplies. For Mrs. Galt had lived so long the simple, unostentatious, unfashionable life of a brainy woman of affluence (all accounts agree that her fortune is about $300,000) who chose her friends because they were agreeable rather than for political, financial or social reasons, such as accrete a number of hostesses in Washington, that she has found it difficult to accustom herself to changed conditions.

Luckily for her she was born with a gift for dressing. She knows by instinct what best suits her gracious style and, having been one of a Southern family early learned enough about sewing to be perfectly well aware of the cut and fit and texture and ensemble of a toilette.

Handsome, Well Groomed.
But clothes do not make Mrs. Galt; she has personality and with her abundance of glistening brown hair, limpid blue eyes and well proportioned figure rather lends distinction to her clothes.

She is decidedly good looking with an exquisite complexion and nice teeth and a lovely neck and arms. There is about her an atmosphere of "homeliness" and of an even, equable temperament and utter lack of nervousness. The many people in Washington who have been wondering how Mrs. Galt will acquit herself at the formal White House affairs, should know that she will be dignified and thoroughly at ease at all times.

As to the circumstances of when and how President Wilson became acquainted with his future wife there is such a varying collection of theories to choose from that the real facts must remain known only to the White House circle and Mrs. Galt's family. Some have it that they met last autumn and immediately became good friends; others insist that while Miss Wilson and Miss Helen Bones met Mrs. Galt then, the President only came to know her in the spring.

The Galt Jewelry Store on Pennsylvania Ave. Washington, D.C.

Residence of Mrs. Galt 1808 Twentieth St. N.W. Washington, D.C.

Whether the introduction was made at the Galt home or whether at the White House is also matter for conjecture. All that really matters being that they met, they loved and they are to marry. One point well worth consideration is that the bride-to-be is setting a fashion many future brides might well emulate—that of trying to be interested in whatever appeals to her betrothed.

Her "Athletic Instructor."

Although some space writers have tried to give an impression that Mrs. Galt had gone in extensively for athletic games and sports it develops that she has been attending the baseball and learning golf only since her friendship with the President began. He has been her instructor in both those diversions and her enthusiasm is therefore all the more to be praised.

From the day the engagement was announced President Wilson and Mrs. Galt have been almost hounded by photographers and reporters and friends and the curious. They have motored to quaint little Harper's Ferry for a dinner at an Inn and to Emmitsburg, Maryland, to lunch with Mrs. Galt's brother-in-law, Sterling Galt. They went with members of both families to New York where a perfectly wonderful engagement ring that Messrs. of all lovers—Riverside Drive and the Park; then they rode in a private car to Philadelphia and saw a World's Series baseball game.

while a goodly slice of the population saw and cheered them and even heroes of the diamond had to take second place in their hours of glory while the cameras snap shot and focussed the next "Presidentess" and her beaming fiancé. There have been numerous theatre parties where the happy distinguished pair signified the proverbial lovers' dislike for publicity by averting their heads in the audience rather than a conspicuous box, and where the future Mrs. Wilson received a promise of her coming exalted station when the house rose en masse at her entrance and the orchestra played the national anthem.

Ideal Summer Home.

Every engaged man longs to lay the world at the feet of his beloved, but it has been given to President Wilson to accomplish it. This winter the representatives of the world's rulers will pay official homage to the new Mrs. Galt, she will take precedence over every other woman in Washington and in the land where she goes there will be Society. The mere fact of the Presidential car standing before her house sets it above and apart from all other houses.

A veritable palace of a summer home awaits her down by the ocean the next warm season. "Shadow Lawn," at Elmhurst, which New Jersey admirers of President Wilson have placed at his disposal has a history—it cost even more in the building than its rich owner had anticipated. The interior furnishings represent perfect taste, an international search and a goodly fortune.

Every day Mrs. Galt receives a bunch of rare purple or mauve orchids from the White House conservatories and every day she wears them. There again she is honored, beyond the woman who can only have roses or violets, but there also her fine perceptions are revealed—for she sacrifices all color schemes of gowns and hats to these flowers—making the clothes merely neutral backgrounds for the bouquets.

At the series of musicals which the President's oldest daughter, Miss Margaret Wilson, is to give shortly Mrs. Galt is to receive, thus enabling her to meet gradually the merging political, fashionable and musical worlds. Unlike other brides, who often have to sue for favor in the family of her husband-to-be, Mrs. Galt finds herself receiving every possible attention from the White House circle of relatives, for even before it became suspected that she was to be the second Mrs. Wilson they had learned to admire and like her.

"Home Town" Gifts.

Naturally Mrs. Galt has been accustomed to the very best there is in jewels and bric-a-brac and silverware and china and yet it is probable that even her satiated tastes in such things will be stimulated by the wedding presents. And one can imagine that the joint gift which residents of the little town of Wytheville, Virginia, where she was born, and Roanoke, where she often visited and went to school will have a peculiar value in her eyes.

In almost every detail circumstances seem to favor the lovely daughter of a mother who was herself a noted soft loveliness of expression and profile which few elderly women possess. Instead of having to go through the ordeal of the first formal affair at the White House alone Mrs. Galt will have the consolation of several other feminine debutantes.

Mrs. McAdoo, daughter of President Wilson and wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, will make her initial appearance as one of "the Cabinet ladies" her morning last winter having prevented her appearance at any State functions. Mrs. Lanning, wife of the Secretary of State, will for the first time be in the receiving line as her husband was not appointed until mid-summer. Mrs. Gregory, wife of the new Attorney-General, is also in the official debutante class so they will share glances and good looks and admiration and reputations for smart dress-

No "left-overs" will be possible because the coming White House bride is going to have a wardrobe full of quietly elegant, well chosen costumes, always with every harmonious accessory that simply demands an equal portion from those about her.

Devout Episcopalian.

Being a devout Episcopalian, while the President is a Presbyterian, many have wondered by which faith the ceremony would be solemnized. Those who have observed the devoted gallantry of the Chief Executive are not wondering at all—they simply know which it will be.

Until about a month ago Mrs. Galt was a communicant of Saint Thomas Episcopal church, but suddenly left there and became a member of the congregation of Saint Margaret's, a small, vine-covered structure at the corner of Connecticut avenue and Bancroft street. It is a very fashionable and conservative congregation, and it is generally believed that Mrs. Galt plans to be married from there.

If the wishes of two young girls are carried out the wedding ring will be fashioned from a solid gold bar which they brought from their native State of California and gave to President Wilson with the request that it be used for that purpose.

One of Nine Children.

The bride-elect is one of nine children, having three sisters and five brothers. Three of the latter reside in Washington, John Randolph Bolling and Julian B. Bolling are connected with the Galt jewelry firm, and Richard Wilmer Bolling being in the real estate business. Rolf E. Bolling, another brother, lives in Panama, where he is the resident manager of a branch of a Washington National Bank. Dr. William E. Bolling, of St. Louis, is a brother, and the sisters are Mrs. Alexander E. Galt, whose husband was a cousin of the late Norman Galt, and it was while visiting her sister shortly after leaving the Powell Plating School of Richmond that she then Mrs. Bolling met her first husband, Mr. Matthew H. Maury, of Annapolis, Alabama, and Miss Bertha Bolling, of Washington, are also her sisters.

As to her age, she has been rated as every age from 38 to 45. Correspondents from Wytheville have stated that in 1891, when at a finishing school, she was 15 years old. But it is a proverb that "a woman is as old as she looks," so that establishes Mrs. Galt as having just passed her 35th birthday. Incidentally on that recent natal day the President gave her a very beautiful and costly diamond-studded wrist watch.

How These Boys Whose Order Stands for Peace and Good Will Are Being Used in the Interests in War.

Copyright, 1915, by International Syndicate.

In a war of any magnitude, it prolonged for any length of time, it is almost certain that draft will be made upon the youth of the land for service in his country's defence. This was true of all the great wars of Europe during the last two centuries and in Napoleon's time in the height of his military success and glory, the youth of France rushed to his colors with enthusiasm and bravery, contributing in no small degree to his many and most famous victories. This draft upon the boys was especially conspicuous in our own Civil War, where both the North and the South yielded up, as a willing sacrifice, the flower of their budding manhood to battle for what each thought to be right and almost sacred. In those days the Boy Scout was unknown in the sense he is known today. There were boy scouts of course, but these were boys who as members of the army did scout duty for their respective regiments.

The Boy Scout of the present time is a far different individual and his mission is one of peace rather than of war—but he has been forced into the awful conflict now raging between the civilized nations of Europe, where many of these brave lads have gone to their death in carrying out the orders of the officers.

The Boy Scout movement, which began in England only a few years ago, has spread all over the world—even to the Balkans where one finds the Roumanian boy, the Bulgarian boy and even the Turkish boy going through the same rigid training as the youth of our own land. This training equips them to be helpful in any emergency or crisis. They are taught obedience to orders of superiors, fidelity to duty, loyalty to country, and above all self-sacrificing devotion to others in distress or danger. These excellent qualities are developed during the formative periods of their lives and in time doing good to others becomes second nature with them.

Royal Scouts.
The Boy Scout movement has the approval of all the European monarchs and many of the Royal children are members of the organization. The two younger sons of King George, the Crown Prince of Belgium, and Prince Albert, the future King of Italy, being especially enthusiastic Scouts. The latter, who is the idol of the law to such an extent that his tutors declare that he cannot sleep until he has done his good act each day. The Little Crown Prince of Belgium, too, is an ardent Scout and has had many opportunities of doing good. During the battle at Liege, and the fall of Antwerp, the Boy Scouts did yeoman service in helping the old and infirm refugees to get away from the doomed city.

German Scout.
In Germany the Boy Scout receives a military training, consequently when he reaches the age of serving his time in the German army he has learned the routine and is practically fit for active service. This training includes camp life in the snow, where they are made to endure all the hardships of a soldier's life. They cook their own food, also prepare a diet for the sick—learn to do hospital work of all kinds—indeed, so thoroughly are these boys trained that were it necessary they could do an army surgeon's first aid work in stopping bleeding from a vein or artery, internal or external, or in diagnosing the kind of fractured limb and binding it in splints. No task is too menial for the German Boy Scout—if it comes in the line of duty to the Fatherland.

Work of English Scout.

The English Boy Scout has also been pressed into service, but only in England—for very few have crossed the channel and even those who did have seen nothing of actual warfare. More than 22,000 of these boys are doing service at present. As soon as the war cloud broke over England word was sent from the Chief Scout Sir Robert Baden Powell to every scout headquarters in the United Kingdom that all scouts would be needed in the crisis and within a week thousands of boys were eager and ready for work. All sorts of duties were assigned to the lads, such as the handing out of notices to inhabitants and other duties connected with billeting, warning, commanding, carrying out communications by means of dispatch riding, signaling and by wireless. In the latter, they are proficient—as this is in the regular curriculum of Scout education. It is no uncommon thing in England to see a wireless squad of Boy Scouts busy flashing out messages to headquarters, or that a French aeroplane is coming, or that a certain dispatch has been dropped by an aircraft. They are employed in guarding and patrolling bridges and culverts and telegraph lines against damage by individual spies. They also act as guides and orderlies and to collect information as to supplies and transports. Helping families of men employed in defence duties and aiding their sick and wounded is another duty which the Scouts are carrying out under the most difficult conditions. They have also established soup kitchens for the orphans of soldiers, first-aid dressing stations, nursing stations, refugees and dispensaries. Another set of scouts do coast duty, such as guiding vessels through uncharted channels and assisting coast guards in their work.

Loyal French Boys.

The French Boy Scouts have been equally active and in addition to their regular duties they have collected large sums of money for the Red Cross. In this they were ably assisted by Miss Anna Held, the well-known French actress, who returned to France shortly after the war began. She at once gathered a company of Boy Scouts about her and, donning the same kind of a uniform, she marched through the streets of Paris at their head. After the parade she led them in singing patriotic French songs, which so roused the enthusiasm of the populace that they gave liberally to the fund for the care of the wounded. Much can be said of the work of the Italian Boy Scout, who goes into the snowy Alps to succor the sick of the families of the men who are at the front, of how they seek out these poor people and oftentimes carry them for miles over the snow to a hospital, using their coats stretched out as their staffs as a stretcher, and how they watch for spies and keep an eye on strangers who happen to stray into Italy.

Balkan Scouts.

The Turkish Boy Scout has his own peculiar way of doing things. Although his work has merit, it is of a different type from that of the other countries. His teachings are Mohammedan and he follows these precepts. He is intensely patriotic and he helps those who are in distress and ever since the night of the Dardanelles began the little khaki clad red fez Turkish boy has been working like a Trojan as a messenger and general helper to the Hospital Corps of his country.

Servia, Bulgaria and Roumania have boy scouts, those of the latter country being especially picturesque. The Queen of that land is deeply interested in the Scout movement and frequently goes out to see them making stretchers and carrying out first aid to the injured work. The true Boy Scout, whatever may be his nationality, if he lives up to the rules and regulations of the order will make a good honest man. "As the twig is bent, so the tree is inclined" is an old adage which fits the Scout for the whole system of teaching is for a useful life and the betterment of the condition of those who are less fortunate.

GERMANY KICKING AND KICKING HARD OVER HIGH PRICES

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Berlin, Oct. 20.—From every part of Germany come in increasing number complaints of the ever mounting cost of living—especially of eatings—and coupled with them more and more frequently the charge that the middleman is to blame, and that speculation, not shortage, is responsible for jacking up prices to an unprecedented height.

Scarcely a day goes by but the food question is aired in at least one of the newspapers. The middleman is charged as regularly as it is made, with the result, as the Tageblatt said, that the more earnestly the true explanation is sought, the more muddled becomes the whole subject.

Butter is up.
Butter has been the latest commodity to be the rabbit season in Germany, and it has been anticipated this year particularly, as the people were in need of this usually inexpensive, yet appetizing food. When the season opened, however, it was found that rabbits were scarce instead of plentiful, and were to be had only at prohibitive prices—ranging from 5.50 to 7 marks ($3.75 to $4.50). It was charged that the middleman had been holding back the supply with intent to increase the prices, but that charge is met by the assertion that the number of hunters this year is smaller than ever before and the number of rabbits shot is correspondingly smaller. Hence, by the law of supply and demand, prices have gone up. It is also pointed out that ammunition, guns and equipment for the hunt are dearer than ever.

The recent experience of a Berlin banker indicates that this sentiment may be some truth in the charges against the middleman. He purchased a pullet in a Berlin game store at 3.75 marks a pound, his protest being met with the assertion that the farmer's country price was so high that it was impossible to retail the bird for less. Yet the next day he found he was able to buy a similar fowl in a suburb for 2.50 marks. A trip to the chicken of a big Berlin restaurant and was assured that in retail, quality and every other particular the two were identical.

In Mining Places.
In the mining country of western Germany the four largest associations of miners, numbering thousands of members, have felt it necessary to petition the government to compel the middleman to make it impossible for the well-to-do to buy up at prohibitive prices all the available meats and fats. Their petition reads:

"Lately the quantity of meat and fats offered for sale so far as the great mass of the poorer people is concerned, has greatly decreased. By the law of supply and demand, the price of meat has risen. It is plain also that the food is being withheld for speculative purposes.

"With the decreasing quantity offered, prices for the foods have risen enormously. The poorer part of the population can no longer afford to purchase the enjoyment of meat at all. If the unfavorable developments are not soon checked they will not be able to have this element of their diet. The population which financially better off is buying up all available meat and fat at any price, because it is unwilling to do without them.

Seeks a Reform.
"Such a development is bound to have the most unfavorable consequences for our people and our economy. Man needs a certain amount of fat for his nourishment. Especially for that portion of the people which does heavy physical labor is fat indispensable. The physical strength in one hand, its health may be maintained and, on the other, that it may be kept in condition to do its work continuously. The workers are especially keyed up in winter during the war that makes powerful nourishment imperative. Especially is this the case with the miners. A minimum of them must do the utmost possible work. If consistent nourishment is not furnished them the work must suffer. Without it it is inevitable that the workers will break down, suffer permanently. This damage must be avoided.

"We ask, therefore, that necessary measures be taken, in order that the supplies of meat and fat which are on hand shall not be used up to too great an extent by the upper and wealthier classes who work far less than the miners, and that the necessary quantities of such foods shall be made available so as to maintain their working strength.

Proposed Measures.
The proposed measures announced by the imperial government for supplying cheap potatoes recognizes the necessity of going into that subject now. We wish nevertheless to express that urgent wish that the supply may begin as soon as possible and at low prices.

The petition is signed by representatives of the "Organization of Miners of Germany," the "Trade Union Christian Miners of Germany," the "Polish Workers' Association," the "Division," and the "Trade Union of Miners H-D."

The visible supply of lard in Berlin at least, has been so small that the magistrate has forbidden its sale to the general public, and has directed that it is to be distributed to worthy poor families, those of soldiers preferred. The National Women's Association is to be in charge of all available lard and have control over its distribution.

PRESIDENT'S TYPEWRITER HAS PARALYSIS OF TYPE AND OTHER AFFLICTIONS

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
Washington, Nov. 20.—When President Wilson's message to congress looks something like this:

In addition to which the machine's alpha is badly chewed as to legs and shoulders. The type is barred from intermittent paralysis. Some of the letters are virtually mute. Oh, have bold, black faces. The ribbon is about as fresh and whole as a battle flag in the face of the mechanism generally is decrepit, and it is heavily through the affairs of state only under the severest Presidential goading. Mr. Wilson admits it is far from ideal, but he likes it, and he is very proud of the fact that it has no hyphen.

You couldn't get a typewritten line out of the President on any machine but this one—not even with a derrick and a jimmie. White House humorists say he has head-raised the poor old thing so long he has developed a personal attachment for it. If so, that is the only valuable attachment it has.

For years and years the ancient machine has endured professional, authorial and presidential pecking. And pecking is right, for Mr. Wilson is a disciple of the Hunt system, or forefinger hesitation. Wherefore it may be said that this is the only typewriter that ever had the distinction of having hesitated with a President. It might be added that this couple is getting ready to lead congress a merry dance this winter while the orchestra plays "O You Reparable Cases."

The low rakish form of this ancient, rusty friend of the President's reposes in his library. They understand each other's idiosyncrasies and eccentricities. They stand ready together at any time to battle submarines, blockades of neutral ports.

DEATHS FROM CANCER INCREASED IN STATE

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Madison, Wis., Nov. 20.—Cancer is on the increase. In common with many other states, Wisconsin's mortality from this fearful malady shows a steady rise. From 1,513 deaths in 1908 to 1,761 in 1914, each year has shown an uninterrupted increase. For the entire year a whole heaviest condition is true. The average annual death rate from cancer for Wisconsin in the last seven years was 1,647.

At ages of forty, one person in eleven dies of cancer.

"Largely because of public ignorance and neglect," declares the state board of health, "cancer now proves fatal to over 90 per cent of the cases. These precautions are suggested by the board in a special cancer bulletin."

"Fear the beginning of cancer. Never be afraid to know the truth. Any painless lump or sore appearing on your body should be examined by your physician. By the time a cancer has become painful the best chance for its cure has passed. But even a painful cancer can be removed permanently if it has not extended too far beyond the place where it began.

"Medicine which relieves pain does not have any effect upon the disease itself; it simply produces a period of freedom from discomfort, and therefore delays the proper treatment."

The latest census statistics (for 1913) show that cancer caused 49,928 deaths in the registration states, the death rate being 7.9 per 100,000 population, as compared with a rate of 7.7 during the preceding year. In 1900 this rate was down to 6.3 per 100,000 people. Cancer of the stomach and liver is reported to be approximately 40 per cent of all deaths from this disease being caused by cancers of these organs. The average age at death was 59.5.

The census reports do not include Milwaukee in a list of large cities where high mortality from cancer prevails. Neither is Wisconsin listed with states of high mortality. Vermont led the states with 11.7 deaths from cancer per 100,000 population.

"Cancer usually begins in some unhealthy spot or some point of local irritation," says the health board's bulletin. "In external cancer there is something to be seen or felt, such as a wart, a mole, a lump or sore, or an unhealed wound or sore. Pain is rarely present. Cancer inside the body is often recognized by symptoms before a lump can be seen or felt. Persistent indigestion, with loss of weight and change of color, is always especially suspicious. The early and hopeful stages of cancer are usually painless.

"Never treat moles or warts with caustic; the whole lesion with its so-called roots should be removed. A hot burn on the tongue or lip from smoking is a source of danger if it does not heal within a few months. If a small ulcer appears on the tongue consult a surgeon at once. Cancer of the tongue is the most malignant form of the disease.

"Beware of that ragged tooth. Consult a dentist, and the ulcer does not heal, it is a surgeon's task. Gallstones should be removed. From four to fourteen per cent of all cases are followed by cancer."

"If cancer of the uterus is recognized at an early stage the life of the patient can be saved. Finally, beware of quick remedies and their bogus testimonials. Many conditions resemble cancer, and behind these, which are not cancer and which would tend to heal without treatment, the cancer specialists take their stand and make their false claims."

This message of hope is given to Wisconsin sufferers. "The only cure for cancer is to remove every vestige of the disease. The only way to do this is by a surgical operation. If taken at the beginning, the majority of cancer cases are curable. All cases will end in death if left alone."

"Records of our best hospitals prove that the chances of cure are very high with early and that these chances decrease with every day of delay."

Evansville News

Evansville, Nov. 20.—Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Baker very pleasantly entertained ten of their friends at a six-thirty o'clock dinner last evening, in honor of their thirtieth wedding anniversary. Miss Baker, who came down to help them celebrate last night.

The afternoon club held its regular meeting yesterday evening. The program being as follows: Reading from American Authors, Hattie Porter; United States and France, Martha Gold; The Thanksgiving Dinner, Elton Spencer; Saynor hunting and fishing, Rissa Tullar; John Alexander, Artist and Man, Eva Snashall. Social committee group 1.

The regular monthly meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held at the home of Mrs. Thompson, on South Madison street, Friday, Nov. 19, at 2:30 o'clock. Mrs. W. Schneider and little daughter June were visitors and friends at Portage this week.

Mrs. Audrey Huddleston left Wednesday for Beloit, where she will visit friends until the first of December. Miss Mae Finn is ill with the measles.

Miss Edith Hoag spent the week end at her home in Milton. Mrs. and Garry and daughter Helen are spending a few days at Portage, where they were called by the illness of the former's sister.

Miss Pauline Garry recently entertained sixteen young friends for a social evening, all reporting a very pleasant time.

Miss Edna Moore has returned from a visit with her daughter at Reedsburg. E. H. Garrett was a recent Janesville business visitor.

Miss Ruth Rowley of Janesville is visiting her sister, Miss Vye Rowley, of this city. Mrs. Luda Zimmerli and Mrs. Mae O'Neil were midweek guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Williams, of this city.

Leon Crawford and Duane Hollibush have returned from a visit with friends at Hudson. E. P. Colton is suffering with eye trouble, due to some previous injury, and during his absence from the depot Harry Wile, second track operator, is relieving him.

V. C. Holmes, who has been spending several days at the Holmes summer cottage at Long Lake, getting the place in readiness for the winter, was expected home today. Loyal Baker attended the big game at Madison today.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Colton were Janesville visitors Wednesday. Mrs. Will Klein and son of Oregon were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis of this city.

Robert Bates, Hugh Hyne and Leslie Miller, who have spent the past four weeks at Saynor hunting and fishing, returned home today. They brought with them a fine deer. Mr. Doris Fulton of Janesville spent Tuesday in this city with Mrs. Fred Ellis.

Knew His Duties.
A soldier on guard in South Carolina during the war was questioned as to his knowledge of his duties. "You know your duty here, do you, sentinel?" "Yes, sir." "Well, now, suppose they should open on you with shells and musketry, what would you do?" "Form a line, sir." "What! One man form a line?" "Yes, sir; form a bee line for camp, sir."

Whitewater News
Whitewater, Nov. 20.—The Whitewater Lecture Course opened last evening with a concert by the Dolezal Bohemian Orchestra. The course opened with the largest seat sale in many years and the concert was exceptionally good.

At a special meeting of the Royal Neighbors last evening at the Woodman hall, sixteen candidates were taken into the lodge, mostly beneficial. There was a large attendance of the local members, including thirty from the Port Atkinson lodge who came as invited guests. The chairman of the Board of Supreme managers, of Hanover, Maude Lowry, lodge deputy who was instrumental in getting up the class there was taken in from Portville, and Clara Wiley, field worker, of Horicon, who is working in Palmyra, were also present. Following installation and a talk by Mrs. Chas. and some of the other visitors, a banquet was served in the dining room, at which about 100 partook.

Edgerton News
UNIQUE ENTERTAINMENT TO BE GIVEN AT FULTON
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
Edgerton, Nov. 20.—The Social Center of Fulton will give something new in the way of entertainment on Tuesday, Nov. 23. The whole day will be given to a discussion of the new school vs. the old school, with an intermission of two hours, from 11:30 to 1:30, for reunion dinner and social good time. The order of the program will be as follows: Meeting in the church from 10:30 to 11:30, will be given to the principal discussion of the subject for debate. Resolved, that the system of teaching in the common schools of today is better adapted to the needs of the pupils than the system in use forty years ago. This part of the debate will be handled by two speakers on the affirmative and two on the negative. Dinner at 12 o'clock in the hall. A charge of twenty-five cents will be made for the dinner. The proceeds will go to the fund to purchase a piano for the social center. At 1:30 the program will be taken up again at the church and each side will demonstrate the truth of their arguments by class work in the fundamental branches of reading, arithmetic, writing and spelling. The spelling class will take the form of a contest between the scholars of forty years ago and those of the modern school.

A unique feature of the program will be the fact that the old school of Fulton of forty years ago this winter will be represented by the teacher and about twenty of the scholars of that school. C. H. Kuntz, as teacher, with some of his old scholars, will defend the negative, while Miss White, principal of the present Fulton school, with her assistants and scholars, will defend the affirmative.

After the rebuttal and discussion of the judges, the subject will be thrown open to public discussion. It is hoped that not only the people of Fulton but the community, will be present, as we are planning on a grand good time and reunion of old scholars and a program of vital educational importance.

Personal.
Mrs. Joseph Johnson and sister, Miss Ruth Berry, are calling on friends and relatives at Stoughton today.

Rev. and Mrs. L. A. Stark of Wau-pun arrived in the city yesterday and are guests at the home of Mrs. Stark's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Post. Rev. Stark will occupy the Congregational church pulpit in place of Rev. Grandt tomorrow.

Mrs. James McIntosh returned from Rochester, Minn., last evening, where she underwent an operation at the Mayo Brothers' hospital. Her many friends will be glad to know that she is able to return home so soon.

On account of the bad weather the Patrick Spencer concert given at Fulton last evening was not largely attended. Mr. Spencer was assisted by Miss Edna Hubbell and the program was well rendered.

the tongue is the most malignant form of the disease.

"Beware of that ragged tooth. Consult a dentist, and the ulcer does not heal, it is a surgeon's task. Gallstones should be removed. From four to fourteen per cent of all cases are followed by cancer."

"If cancer of the uterus is recognized at an early stage the life of the patient can be saved. Finally, beware of quick remedies and their bogus testimonials. Many conditions resemble cancer, and behind these, which are not cancer and which would tend to heal without treatment, the cancer specialists take their stand and make their false claims."

This message of hope is given to Wisconsin sufferers. "The only cure for cancer is to remove every vestige of the disease. The only way to do this is by a surgical operation. If taken at the beginning, the majority of cancer cases are curable. All cases will end in death if left alone."

"Records of our best hospitals prove that the chances of cure are very high with early and that these chances decrease with every day of delay."

UNIQUE ENTERTAINMENT TO BE GIVEN AT FULTON
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
Edgerton, Nov. 20.—The Social Center of Fulton will give something new in the way of entertainment on Tuesday, Nov. 23. The whole day will be given to a discussion of the new school vs. the old school, with an intermission of two hours, from 11:30 to 1:30, for reunion dinner and social good time. The order of the program will be as follows: Meeting in the church from 10:30 to 11:30, will be given to the principal discussion of the subject for debate. Resolved, that the system of teaching in the common schools of today is better adapted to the needs of the pupils than the system in use forty years ago. This part of the debate will be handled by two speakers on the affirmative and two on the negative. Dinner at 12 o'clock in the hall. A charge of twenty-five cents will be made for the dinner. The proceeds will go to the fund to purchase a piano for the social center. At 1:30 the program will be taken up again at the church and each side will demonstrate the truth of their arguments by class work in the fundamental branches of reading, arithmetic, writing and spelling. The spelling class will take the form of a contest between the scholars of forty years ago and those of the modern school.

A unique feature of the program will be the fact that the old school of Fulton of forty years ago this winter will be represented by the teacher and about twenty of the scholars of that school. C. H. Kuntz, as teacher, with some of his old scholars, will defend the negative, while Miss White, principal of the present Fulton school, with her assistants and scholars, will defend the affirmative.

After the rebuttal and discussion of the judges, the subject will be thrown open to public discussion. It is hoped that not only the people of Fulton but the community, will be present, as we are planning on a grand good time and reunion of old scholars and a program of vital educational importance.
